

EUROPEAN COMMISSION

Ursula von der Leyen
The President

Brussels, 20 March 2023

Dear colleagues,

At last month's Special Meeting of the European Council, we agreed to strengthen and accelerate our work with an ambitious set of operational measures on migration and border management. Ahead of our next meeting, I would like to update you on progress. The terrible loss of life in the shipwreck off the coast of Calabria at the end of February was a vivid reminder of the urgency for action.

While the challenges of migration are constantly evolving, the solutions share a common thread. A fair and sustainable solution can only be found in a European and balanced approach. We can achieve much more when we act together.

This is true for all our key goals: effective external borders, working with partners to prevent irregular departures and break the business model of the smuggling networks, supporting those in need of international protection, offering safe and alternative legal pathways, and returning those with no right to stay. Our discussion on competitiveness will also serve as a reminder that, in addition to reskilling and upskilling our labour force, facilitating access to the labour market for third-country nationals, including through the recognition of skills and qualifications, can help answer our own needs. It is also an important element in our engagement with partner countries.

Balance is at the heart of the New Pact on Migration and Asylum, and this is why we must keep up the momentum to advance in line with the Joint Roadmap of the European Parliament and Council towards agreement before the end of this legislature.

In the meantime, the operational measures set out in my letter and discussed in our February meeting show how much we can already do now. I outlined four areas for immediate action: on strengthening external borders; on border procedures and expedited returns; on addressing secondary movements and ensuring effective solidarity; and on working with partners to improve migration management and return. In the space of just one month, there has already been progress in all these areas.

Strengthening external borders: On 14 March, the Commission set out a new strategic approach on European Integrated Border Management for the next five years. This is the result of close collaboration with Member States and the European Parliament. It provides a clear framework for cooperation and coordination for over 120,000 European Border and Coast Guard officers from Member States' national authorities and of Frontex.

We need to target our means effectively, to make best use of the EUR 600 million being made available shortly to substantially support Member States with border control and technological equipment. A first objective would be the key border between Bulgaria and Türkiye, where the Commission is working with the Bulgarian authorities to finalise an assessment of needs. Frontex has also been taking a fresh look at overall needs at all external borders. It is expected to reach conclusions at its Management Board next week, identifying key operations for strengthening border protection.

We have continued our close cooperation with partners in North Africa, and the delivery of vessels to Libya continues to reinforce search and rescue capacities. The European Search and Rescue Contact group has been relaunched, offering a platform for Member States to engage with the aim of setting up an enhanced cooperation framework for search and rescue. The Commission has also taken contacts with several Member States on identified discrepancies in the registration of irregular arrivals, and we have agreed with Member States to step up the work of the Blueprint Network to establish a common EU situational awareness and early warning system.

In the Western Balkans, Frontex has started deploying its border guards in Serbia, with already 130 standing corps deployed at its borders with Hungary and Bulgaria. Recently Serbia confirmed its commitment to swiftly start negotiations on a new status agreement which will allow the deployment of standing corps also between the borders of the Western Balkan partners. Negotiations with Montenegro and Albania on status agreements allowing for deployments and joint patrols have taken a decisive step forward. In addition, the new EUR 40 million border protection assistance package for the Western Balkans with modernised equipment is underway.

Border procedures and expedited returns: An agreement has been reached with the governments of Bulgaria and Romania to set up pilot schemes showcasing good practices in accelerated asylum procedures and effective returns, border management and reinforced cooperation with neighbouring countries based on applicable EU and national law. These pilot schemes will contribute to prevent irregular migration, as well as strengthen border and migration management. They are being set up with the financial and operational support of the Commission, Frontex, Europol and the EU Agency for Asylum.

On 14 March, the Commission also adopted a recommendation on mutual recognition of return decisions, made possible by the entry into operation of the revamped Schengen Information System, and expediting return. The aim is to speed up returns by increasing synergies between asylum and return procedures, facilitating faster returns close to external borders and stepping up measures to prevent absconding. The EU Asylum Agency is preparing a guidance document on Safe Third Countries, following discussions in its Management Board this month. Work continues to address different routes, and the Commission is working with the Member States most concerned on the Action Plans for the Atlantic/Western Mediterranean and the Eastern Mediterranean, while pursuing efforts to implement the EU-Turkey Statement.

Secondary movements and effective solidarity: New procedures for the Voluntary Solidarity Mechanism have been agreed in the Solidarity Platform and the first transfers have now taken place from Spain and Malta, complementing those from Italy and Cyprus. On this basis, it will now be important to continue accelerating transfers.

We are also monitoring progress with implementation of the Dublin Roadmap, including registration in Eurodac, supporting work that will reduce incentives for secondary movements. The Commission will report on the implementation of the Dublin Roadmap later in the year, as set out at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 9 March. New support amounting to EUR 200 million will target help on reception, addressing key concerns such as the reception of unaccompanied minors, increasing capacities close to external borders and meeting needs of specific Member States.

Working with partners to improve migration and return management: Since our last meeting, contacts have been stepped up with key partners. High Representative/Vice-President Borrell, Commissioner Várhelyi and Commissioner Johansson visited the Western Balkans and we see both growing visa policy alignment and cooperation with Frontex, leading to sustained decreases of irregular migration along the route. We have assisted Bosnia and Herzegovina in stepping up returns to the countries of origin, with similar arrangements to be launched soon also with Serbia. A new EUR 30 million anti-smuggling regional project is bringing together EU and Member State experts to support the Western Balkans partner countries in the fight against smuggling. The Commission will strengthen its monitoring of the visa policy alignment and will present a comprehensive report paving the way for a legislative proposal amending the visa suspension mechanism.

With partners in North Africa, we continue to equip and train border management and search and rescue services, while also developing the law enforcement and prosecution cooperation essential to countering the organised crime gangs behind migrant smuggling. The first phase of our border protection assistance package for Egypt is being implemented. We have intensified our cooperation across the region to step up returns from North Africa directly to the countries of origin. These are key goals for the more than half a billion euros devoted to current border protection and anti-smuggling projects in North Africa and the Western Balkans. The Commission is also supporting Türkiye to prevent irregular migration flows at the Eastern borders with a new EUR 220 million project for state-of-the-art surveillance equipment.

Given the increasing migratory pressure, the Commission stands ready to mobilise an additional EUR 110 million in 2023 for projects in North Africa on top of the already committed EUR 208 million to support voluntary return, anti-smuggling cooperation, equipment, and training. On 1 March, Commissioner Várhelyi signed five cooperation agreements with Morocco including EUR 152 million in migration budget support. Vice-President Schinas will be visiting Egypt on 26-28 March and Commissioner Johansson will be joined by Italian and French Ministers in a visit to Tunisia soon. We believe in engaging closely with partners in a Team Europe approach.

I therefore encourage you to contribute to these efforts to enhance our common response, including with Commission and Member States' joint visits to partner countries.

Reinforced cooperation with Bangladesh following a comprehensive engagement on migration and proposed measures under the Visa Code has brought real results. Further engagement, including a visit by Commissioner Johansson in November last year, combined with work on the Talent Partnership for labour migration, resulted in nearly all readmission requests now being accepted. Frontex's first return flight to Bangladesh on 15 March is a major landmark.

Planning for the EU Ministerial Forum on Resettlement and Complementary Pathways in May is now advancing, with a specific focus on innovative practices such as well as humanitarian corridors. The Commission will provide at least EUR 480 million in funding for resettlement and humanitarian corridors until 2025, offering to support the resettlement of around 50 000 persons. The Forum will be prepared at technical level with Member States and the EU Asylum Agency.

To continue advancing in our work with external partners we will need to support them in addressing root causes of irregular migration and harness all leverages and tools, including by providing for safe and orderly legal pathways. Over time, we have been building some powerful tools: the Post-Cotonou Agreement is a good example, the most comprehensive legally binding framework on return and readmission and irregular migration yet agreed with 79 African, Caribbean, and Pacific partners. The signature of this agreement is crucial for us to continue supporting cooperation activities in partner countries.

We have shown in the past year how powerful our impact can be when the European institutions and Member States work together in a whole-of-government, Team Europe approach. We will only bring our collective weight to bear if we work together in very practical ways. Pooling our efforts, speaking with one voice, and ensuring that partners see us working together as a single entity, are all essential to keeping up the momentum of action.

Yours sincerely,

Ursula von der Leyen

Follow-up after February Special European Council (situation as of 17 March)

President's letter/EUCO conclusions	Follow-up
1. Strengthening key external borders through targeted Union measures, combining Frontex deployments of personnel and equipment, mobilisation of EU funds to support Member States in reinforcing border control capabilities, means of surveillance and equipment and bilateral funding (including through the voluntary solidarity mechanism). The Bulgaria-Türkiye border to be a priority, open to the involvement of other interested Member States.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Multi-annual strategic policy for European Integrated Border Management adopted by Commission on 14 March. • Frontex review of deployments and priorities ahead of Management Board on 23 March; call for equipment to be put at the disposal of Frontex closed in January 2023, applications from 13 Member States being evaluated. • Launch of a Commission call in mid-2023 to support the purchase of electronic surveillance systems at the external border. • Bulgarian-Turkish border: Commission-Bulgaria joint needs assessment is underway and will be concluded by end March. Actions to support the purchase of equipment at the Bulgarian-Turkish border to be launched in April 2023.
2. Reinforced border management in partner countries: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Reinforced regional cooperation in the Mediterranean to strengthen coordination of search and rescue capacities and border surveillance at sea and land borders of Tunisia, Egypt, and Libya. Increased support for equipment and training will be provided. This will complement continued support to UNHCR and IOM to assist these countries to build their capacity for asylum and reception of those in need of international protection. Work with North African countries and IOM to return people with no right to stay. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Search and Rescue: European Search and Rescue Contact Group meeting on 31 January followed up with discussions on situational awareness and private vessels (27-28 February). Cooperation with North Africa partners to be taken forward in upcoming missions (point 11). • Following first delivery in February, two more boats to be delivered to Libya in coming weeks. • Reactivation of the trilateral EU-AU-UN Task Force to support safe pathways and assisted voluntary returns out of Libya confirmed in principals meeting in Brussels on 20 March. • Funds contracted in January 2023, tendering underway for radar equipment to strengthen Tunisia's coastal surveillance and Maritime Rescue Coordination Centre. Support to be expanded to meet Tunisia's needs for maintenance, surveillance equipment, and vessels. • Equipment and capacity building for Egypt: Market search ongoing to find vessels to refurbish, to strengthen Search and Rescue capacity. Second programme being prepared for July 2023 to strengthen management of land and sea borders (drones/electro optical systems).
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Deployment of border guards from Frontex and joint patrols to support border management in the Western Balkans through the conclusion of new status agreements with Albania, Montenegro, Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina. This should be complemented by specific support from Frontex and Member States on return. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Status Agreement with North Macedonia enters into force on 1 April, deployment of Frontex Standing Corps mid-April. • Technical negotiations concluded with Montenegro and Albania on 22-24 February, now consultation with Member States. • Need to launch formal negotiations with Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina underlined in Commission visits.

9. To ensure implementation of the Voluntary Solidarity Mechanism, participating Member States – based on the improvements identified by the Commission – should agree on a significant simplification of the existing relocation processes in the first quarter of 2023 and accelerate pledging, including alternatives to relocation such as financial contributions. The Commission will use the Solidarity Platform to coordinate the matching of pledges with the needs of Member States.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Revised Standard Operating Procedures for the Voluntary Solidarity Mechanism speeding up selection of candidates for transfer endorsed by the Solidarity Platform on 24 February. • 524 relocations took place so far, 397 from Italy, 111 from Cyprus, 34 from Spain and 16 from Malta. The transfers took place to Germany, France, Croatia, Romania and Luxembourg.
10. Work on the full implementation of the Dublin Roadmap, with the support of the EU Asylum Agency, will be taken forward as a priority to address bottlenecks in the implementation of Dublin transfers. The Commission will monitor this work closely.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Dublin Contact Committee on 16 March took stock of Roadmap implementation reviewing actions so far. • Commission will conduct bilateral meetings with all concerned Member States by the end of May to identify and resolve gaps in the implementation of the Dublin system.
