

THE REGULATION OF MIGRATION, ASYLUM AND MOVEMENT IN THE 'NEW EUROPE'

34th Annual Conference of the European Group for the Study of Deviance and Social Control

31 August to 3 September 2006
Corinth, Peloponnese, Greece

In collaboration with School of Social Sciences, University of Peloponnese

CALL FOR PAPERS

The impact of the 2004 Madrid and 2005 London bombings brought a new and fiercely regulatory extension to the movement of people in the context of the 'war on terror'. Other events, such as the assassination of the film director Van Gogh in the Netherlands or the riots at the suburbs of Paris, brought up new questions about immigration policies and models of integration in Europe. Ironically, these policies and models have consolidated at the very time that the European Union is going through unprecedented expansion to include member states from the former Eastern bloc. In turn, expansion has revived theoretical and political debates about 'old' and 'new' immigration and modes of social control or conflict. This conference considers these developments, and the associated policies and practices both centrally and within member-states of the European Union. It also welcomes papers focusing on these issues from outside Europe.

Papers are invited on any aspect of the theme, including:

- Theories of Space, Power and State Control
- Liberal Democratic States and Authoritarianism
- Immigration Policies and Models of Integration
- Countries of 'New' and 'Old' Immigration
- 'Legal' versus 'Illegal' Immigration
- Ethnic Communities; second and third generation
- Criminalisation and Victimisation of Immigrants
- Migration, Asylum and Detention
- New Systems of Surveillance
- 'Suspect Communities'; Fear and Hostility
- Gender and Violence in the 'New Europe'
- Trafficking Women and Children
- Organized Crime beyond Frontiers
- Cultural Criminology
