CRIME, JUSTICE AND SURVEILLANCE

A TWO-DAY

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE HOSTED BY THE CENTRE FOR CRIMINOLOGICAL
RESEARCH, UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

WWW.SURVEILLANCE-AND-SOCIETY.ORG

Wednesday 5th and Thursday 6th April 2006

In the UK the last decade has seen an unprecedented deployment of surveillance technologies and practices in the name of crime control. Drug testing, electronic monitoring, intelligence led policing initiatives, DNA testing and video monitoring have all expanded rapidly. These developments are not unique to the UK, and this conference seeks to explore the British experience in the context of developments in Europe and beyond and to consider the social, political and legal issues that arise from the expansion of surveillance. The conference is inter-disciplinary with contributions from sociologists, anthropologists, geographers, criminologists, socio-legal scholars, historians, and social scientists researching surveillance practices and technologies.
