Acknowledgements

This bulletin has been prepared by staff in the Policing Statistics team which is part of Home Office Statistics within Home Office Science.

The authors and editors are grateful to colleagues in the Association of Chief Police Officers, Crown Prosecution Service, National Offender Management Service, Scottish Prison Service and police forces in Great Britain for contributing figures. Also, for the support and assistance of colleagues in the Office for Security and Counter-Terrorism and Ministry of Justice with quality assuring data published in this report.

Further information

Copies of this and other Home Office statistical bulletins on the use of police powers relating to terrorism are available from the Home Office Internet site: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/science-research/research-statistics/counter-terrorism/.

The figures presented in this bulletin cover Great Britain only, and are likely to change as police investigations progress and criminal trials are held. Data for Northern Ireland are published separately and the most recent published data, for 2010/11, can be viewed at: http://www.nio.gov.uk/11-2.pdf.

Information on stops and searches under the Terrorism Act 2000 in England and Wales is published in the Home Office's annual series, 'Police Powers and Procedures, England and Wales', and the Ministry of Justice report 'Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System England and Wales'. Final validated information on all stops and searches during 2010/11 will be published in these, along with breakdowns by police force area and ethnicity. The latest bulletins, covering the years up to and including 2009/10, are online at:

This Statistical Bulletin has been produced by statisticians working in the Home Office Statistics Unit. Although this output is not currently given National Statistics accreditation, the protocols for such statistics have been mirrored as closely as possible.

The governance arrangements in the Home Office for statistics were strengthened on 1 April 2008 to place the statistical teams under the direct management of a Chief Statistician who reports to the National Statistician with respect to all professional statistical matters.

1 Terrorism arrests and outcomes

A total of 153 persons were arrested for terrorism-related offences in the year ending 30 September 2011, compared with 133 in the previous 12 months and a total of 2,050 since 11 September 2001. Forty-six per cent of persons arrested for terrorism-related offences in the year ending 30 September 2011 were arrested under section 41 (s41) of the Terrorism Act 2000 (TACT), compared with 40 per cent in the previous year and 77 per cent since 11 September 2001 (Table 1.01).

Box 1.1 Terrorism-related offences covered in this bulletin

Arrests

Section 41 of the Terrorism Act 2000 (TACT) gives the police the power to arrest a person whom they reasonably suspect to be involved in terrorist-related activity without a warrant. These powers are similar to standard powers of arrest given by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE); however, s41 arrest powers allow detention of suspects for a longer period before release (see Box 1.2 for more information on pre-charge detentions). Not all persons suspected of terrorism-related offences are initially arrested under s41 of TACT since a link to terrorism is not always evident at the time of arrest. As a result, both terrorism-related arrests made under s41 of TACT and those made under PACE legislation are included in this bulletin.

Charges

Terrorism-related arrests can result in charges for any criminal offence, not just those covered by TACT. Unless otherwise specified, all data described in this bulletin as relating to 'terrorism-related' refer to:

- TACT offences;
- failure to comply at border controls under Schedule 7 of TACT;
- non-TACT legislation but offences that are considered to be terrorism-related (e.g. a charge for a Firearms Act offence that was directly related to terrorist activity).

Of the 153 persons arrested in the year ending 30 September 2011, 39 per cent (59 persons) were charged, compared with a charging rate of 41 per cent (54 out of 133 persons) in the previous 12 months and 36 per cent (740 out of 2,050) since 11 September 2001. A comparison with persons aged 18 and over arrested for recorded crime offences in 2010/11 indicates that 45 per cent are proceeded against at court.¹

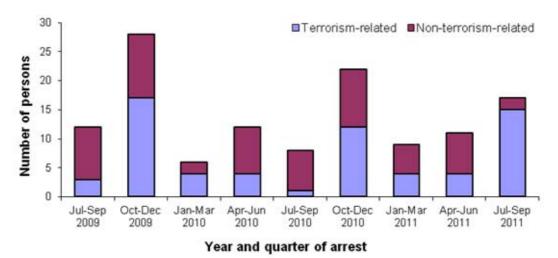

Of the 59 persons charged in the year ending 30 September 2011, 59 per cent (35 persons) were for terrorism-related offences as compared with 48 per cent in the previous 12 months and 62 per cent since 11 September 2001 (Table 1.02).

Forty-four per cent (68 persons) of those arrested were released without charge in the year ending 30 September 2011 compared with 48 per cent (64 persons) in the previous year and 54 per cent (1,105 persons) since 11 September 2001 (Table 1.02).

Forty-five persons were arrested for terrorism-related offences in the latest quarter (July to September 2011). Seventeen of these had been charged at the time of publication, 15 with TACT offences (Table 1.02).

Box 1.2 Pre-charge detention under the Terrorism Act (TACT)

Under s41 of TACT, police officers have the power to arrest persons suspected of terrorism-related offences without a warrant. These arrest powers also allow the extended detention of suspects beyond the maximum four days available under standard arrest powers.

The period of detention allowed under s41 has varied considerably. From the commencement of the legislation on 19 February 2001 to 20 January 2004, the maximum period of pre-charge detention was seven days. From 20 January 2004 to 25 July 2006 the limit was extended to 14 days. From 25 July 2006 the maximum period was extended further to 28 days but, since 25 January 2011, has reverted to a maximum of 14 days.

Three of the 71 persons arrested under TACT legislation in the year ending 30 September 2011 were held in pre-charge detention for more than seven days. Forty-six per cent of those detained were dealt with within two days (Table 1.03).

Excluding the two persons charged with Schedule 7 offences, there were 33 persons charged with terrorism-related offences in the year ending 30 September 2011; two of these were not proceeded against and 25 were awaiting prosecution at the time of publication. Five of the remaining six persons were proceeded against and convicted, the other one was acquitted. Since 11 September 2001, 251 persons have been convicted of terrorism-related offences out of 440 charged, a conviction rate of 57 per cent (Table 1.04).

Data provided by the Crown Prosecution Service show that, during the year ending 30 September 2011, 13 persons stood trial for terrorism-related offences, seven of whom were convicted. Thirty-one persons stood trial during the previous year, 23 of whom were convicted (Table 1.05).

Six of the seven persons convicted during the year ending 30 September 2011 received custodial sentences (including one sentenced to life imprisonment); the remaining person was given a non-custodial sentence². Two of the seven persons convicted pleaded guilty, compared with ten of the 13 persons convicted in the previous 12 months (Table 1.06).

There were 121 persons in prison in Great Britain for terrorist/extremist or related offences on 30 September 2011, of whom 22 were classified as domestic extremists/separatists (Table 1.07).

In the year ending 30 September 2011, 29 prisoners being held for terrorism-related offences were discharged from prison (Table 1.08).

² Includes sentences such as fines, conditional discharges, community service orders and hospital orders under the Mental Health Act, among others.

^{1.} Section 41 of the Terrorism Act 2000 gives the police the power to arrest a person whom they reasonably suspect to be a terrorist without a warrant. This is similar to the powers of arrest contained in wider criminal legislation.

^{2.} Persons suspected of terrorism-related offences are not always arrested under section 41 of the Terrorism Act 2000. A terrorist link is not always substantiated; all outcomes of these arrests are shown in Tables 1.02 and 1.04.

^{3.} Difference between the totals for the 12 months ending 30 September 2010 and 30 September 2011.

^{4.} Care should be taken in interpreting percentages in this table as the numbers on which they are based are relatively low.

^{1.} Excludes those arrested under other legislation. Although an investigation is considered terrorism-related the 14-day maximum pre-charge detention period does not apply in such cases.

^{1.} Includes historical terrorism cases which predate the introduction of the Terrorist Acts (2000 & 2006) and where persons were imprisoned pre-2001 following a terrorist investigation, acts of terrorism, or for membership of a proscribed organisation. This includes convicted terrorists from the 1970s to 1990s for a range of offences. Also, members of groups such as the Palestinian Liberation Organisation (PLO), Democratic Revolutionary Movement for the Liberation of Arabistan (DRMLA) and domestic bombers.

2 Stops and searches under the Terrorism Act 2000

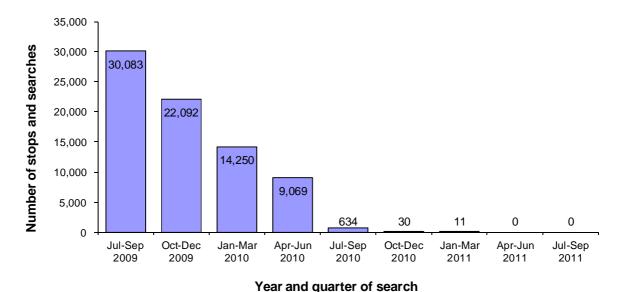

Section 44 (s44) of TACT provided police officers with the power to stop and search persons and vehicles for articles which could be used in connection with terrorism. Police forces were able to authorise use of s44 stops and searches within a particular area during an agreed period without the need of reasonable suspicion. Where powers were authorised for longer than 48 hours, the Home Secretary was required to confirm such authorisations. The majority of those police forces that regularly authorised the use of s44 ceased using the power to search persons following the Home Secretary's statement on 8 July 2010. On 18 March 2011, all s44 powers were formally replaced with section 47A (s47A) stop and search powers, which have a significantly higher threshold for authorisation than s44 searches. Further details can be found in Box 2.1.

A total of 41 stops and searches were made in Great Britain under s44 between October 2010 and March 2011, a 99.8 per cent fall compared to the period October 2009 to March 2010. Between April and September 2011 there were no searches under s47A, compared with 9,703 conducted under s44 during the same period in 2010. Moreover, there have been no uses of s47A since the commencement of the power on 18 March 2011 (Table 2.01).

The s44 stops and searches made since October 2010 were conducted by two police forces, with each accounting for approximately a half: City of London (51%) and Metropolitan Police Service (49%) (Table 2.01).

More than half (23 out of 41) of those stopped and searched under these powers in the year ending 30 September 2011 classified themselves as White. Five persons chose not to self-define their ethnicity, and both the Asian or Asian British and Black or Black British categories included four self-classifications. The remainder defined themselves as Mixed (3 persons) or Chinese or Other (2 persons). As there were far fewer s44 stops and searches conducted in the year to 30 September 2011 than in the previous 12 months, caution should be taken when looking at changes to the proportion of persons in each self-defined ethnicity category across the two years (Table 2.02).

Figure 2.1 Stops and searches made under sections 44(1)(2) and subsequently 47A of the Terrorism Act 2000¹

1. On 8 July 2010 the majority of police forces that regularly authorised the use of s44 ceased using the power to search persons following the Home Secretary's statement.

Box 2.1 Terrorism Act 2000 (Remedial) Order 2011 and new section 47A Schedule 6B of the Terrorism Act

The Home Secretary announced on 26 January 2011 the findings from the review of counter-terrorism and security powers. One of the recommendations of the review was that stop and search powers under sections 44 to 47 of the Terrorism Act 2000 should be repealed and replaced with a much more limited power.

This recommendation was based on the Government's commitments to introduce safeguards against the misuse of terrorism legislation, and in order to bring the powers into line with the European Convention on Human Rights, following the European Court of Human Rights ruling in the case of Gillan and Quinton v United Kingdom.

The recommendation is being implemented by provisions in the Protection of Freedoms Bill which was introduced to Parliament on 11 February 2011. The review also recommended that consideration be given to whether the new counter-terrorism stop and search powers should be available more quickly than the Protection of Freedoms Bill would allow. On 1 March 2011 the Home Secretary announced that she had concluded that the police do need the powers more quickly than the Bill would allow.

The Home Secretary therefore made a "remedial order" under section 10 of the Human Rights Act 1998 to make immediate changes to the legislation. The new powers contained in that order are supported by a robust statutory Code of Practice.

The remedial order replaces sections 44 to 47 of the Terrorism Act 2000 with a more targeted and proportionate power. The provisions in the order will cease to have effect on the coming into force of the similar provisions in the Protection of Freedoms Bill – in other words, the order makes temporary provision while the Protection of Freedoms Bill is being taken through Parliament. The order came into force on 18 March 2011.

Section 47A and Schedule 6B of the Terrorism Act 2000 introduce replacement stop and search provisions. An authorisation for the use of the new stop and search powers can only be given under section 47A where the person giving authorisation reasonably suspects an act of terrorism will take place and considers the powers are necessary to prevent such an act. An authorisation can last for no longer and cover no greater an area than is necessary to prevent such an act. This represents a significantly higher threshold for giving an authorisation than the "expediency" test under section 44 of the 2000 Act.

Also available to the police are powers of stop and search under section 43 (s43) of TACT, where an officer does not need an authorisation as described above, but instead should have reasonable suspicion that the suspect is involved in terrorist-related activity. A total of 1,212 persons were stopped and searched by the Metropolitan Police Service in the year ending 30 September 2011 under this power, up from 905 in the previous 12 months, an increase of 34 per cent (Tables 2b and 2.03).

The proportion of persons stopped and searched who classified themselves as Asian or Asian British increased from 30 per cent in the year ending 30 September 2010, to 34 per cent in the year ending 30 September 2011. During the same period, the proportion of persons searched describing themselves as White fell from 46 per cent to 36 per cent. The proportion of persons searched who self-classified as Black or Black British fell one percentage point, from ten to nine per cent (Table 2.03).

The year ending 30 September 2011 saw one arrest resulting from s44 stops and searches in Great Britain, an arrest rate of 2.4 per cent (Table 2a). The arrest was not identified as being terrorism-related. A further 33 arrests were made by the Metropolitan Police Service following stops and searches under s43, which accounted for 2.7 per cent of total searches (Table 2b).

NOTES

Legislation

- 1. Detailed information on the Terrorism Act 2000 (TACT) can be found on the UK legislation website at: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2000/11/contents.
- 2. Stops and searches under section 43 of TACT This power is available to police for searching suspects whom they reasonably suspect are involved in terrorist activity. Detailed information can be found at: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2000/11/section/43.
- 3. Stops and searches under sections 44 and 47A of TACT These apply to situations where police require the power to stop and search persons for involvement in terrorism-related activity where there is no suspicion of involvement. Information about the power to conduct searches under section44 of TACT is at: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2000/11/section/44. However, as outlined in Box 2.1, section 44 was repealed and replaced with section 47A in 2011. The key difference between the two powers is that while the former allowed authorisations in an entire police force area without specific intelligence of an attack, its replacement allows authorisation to a particular area and only where specific intelligence of a possible attack is known. Further information about section 47A of TACT is available at: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/2011/631/body/made.

Data

- 4. The following data providers contributed to this bulletin:
 - ACPO Counter Terrorism Coordination Centre (ACTCC) The ACTCC collects data covering all terrorism arrests in Great Britain (i.e. excluding Northern Ireland) through to their subsequent outcome. This information relates to data collected from 11 September 2001; although the total number of arrests between February 2001 and 11 September 2001 are known, no further breakdown is possible. A data snapshot of the ACTCC's live database is provided to the Home Office, with latest information based on the principal charge, and is updated for each quarterly publication. It is not unusual for charges to be amended or added during the police investigations or criminal trials. As a result, all figures in this bulletin are subject to change in future bulletins.
 - Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) The CPS's Counter-Terrorism Division holds information on all trials of terrorism-related suspects, including sentences and appeals. They regularly share information with the ACTCC to validate data.
 - Ministry of Justice (MoJ) The MoJ maintains a list of known terrorists/extremists held, on remand or as convicted prisoners, in prisons in England and Wales. The list includes those who entered prison before 11 September 2001 and who are excluded from the data collected by the ACTCC. Information is also held on those subject to extradition orders or held by immigration powers. Data on the whole England and Wales prison population are published quarterly in the MoJ statistical bulletin 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics'. The most recent update containing prison populations by nationality relates to the position as at 31 March 2011, and can be viewed at: http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/statistics-and-data/prisons-and-probation/index.htm.
 - Scottish Prison Service The Scottish Prison Service provides information on known terrorists/extremists held as remand or convicted prisoners in Scotland.
 - Police forces Data published in this bulletin on stops and searches under sections 44 and 47A of TACT are provided to the Home Office by individual police forces as a part of formal statistical returns. Not all police forces are able to separately identify section 43 searches from their data; therefore, the data on section 43 searches published in the bulletin cover the Metropolitan Police Service only. Persons stopped and searched are asked to self-classify their own ethnicity using the 2001 census categories (see Note 8).

5. The comparison between the proportion of terrorism-related arrests resulting in a charge and the proportion of arrests for recorded crime offences resulting in a prosecution is based on the most comparable data available to the Home Office. Data on prosecutions have been used for this comparison in lieu of charges because data on charges for recorded crime offences are not collected centrally. Most terrorism-related charges result in court proceedings; however, many take time to come to court, therefore a comparison between charging rates for terrorism-related offences, and prosecution rates for recorded crime offences is the most accurate comparison available.

Terrorist/Extremist prisoners

- 6. Domestic extremists These are defined as individuals who belong to groups or causes that originate in the United Kingdom (although they may have international links) and are often associated with 'single issue' protestors who seek to further their cause through the committing of criminal offences. Some of these cases may not require the involvement of police counterterrorism resources but may involve other specialist criminal justice resources. There is a wide spectrum of domestic extremist causes including extreme left- and right-wing groups, animal rights extremists and domestic (sometimes called "lone wolf") bombers. Of those held in prison custody, the majority belong to extremist animal rights groups, or are members or associates of far-right groups.
- 7. Historical terrorist cases These individuals' court cases pre-date the introduction of the Terrorism Acts. They were imprisoned pre-2001 following a terrorist investigation, acts of terrorism, or for membership of a proscribed terrorist organisation. They include convicted terrorists from the 1970s to 1990s for a range offences and who remained in prison custody on 31 March 2008. They include members of groups such as the Palestinian Liberation Organisation (PLO), Democratic Revolutionary Movement for the Liberation of Arabistan (DRMLA), and domestic bombers. It should be noted that a number of convicted terrorists, particularly Irish Republican and Loyalist paramilitaries, have been released either through completion of sentence or under the terms of the Belfast Agreement of 1998. These cases are not included in these figures.

Ethnicity of persons searched

8. Ethnicity data in Chapter 2 of the bulletin are based upon self-defined classifications used during the 2001 census. This system comprises 16 distinct ethnic categories (plus a 'non-stated' category). For the purposes of the bulletin, these ethnicities are grouped into six main categories:

White British Irish Other	Mixed White and Black Caribbean White and Black African White and Asian Other Mixed	Asian/Asian British Indian Pakistani Bangladeshi Other Asian
Black or Black British Caribbean African Other Black	Chinese or Other Chinese Other	Not stated
