Amendments to a draft act

In amendments by Parliament, amendments to draft acts are highlighted in bold italics. Highlighting in normal italics is an indication for the relevant departments showing parts of the draft act which may require correction when the final text is prepared – for instance, obvious errors or omissions in a language version. Suggested corrections of this kind are subject to the agreement of the departments concerned.

The heading for any amendment to an existing act that the draft act seeks to amend includes a third line identifying the existing act and a fourth line identifying the provision in that act that Parliament wishes to amend. Passages in an existing act that Parliament wishes to amend, but that the draft act has left unchanged, are highlighted in bold. Any deletions that Parliament wishes to make in such passages are indicated thus: [...].

DRAFT EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT LEGISLATIVE RESOLUTION

on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime

(Ordinary legislative procedure: first reading)

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Commission proposal to Parliament and the Council (COM(2011)0275),
- having regard to Article 294(2) and Article 82(2) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, pursuant to which the Commission submitted the proposal to Parliament (C7-0127/2011),
- having regard to Article 294(3) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union,
- having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee of 7 December 2011<sup>1</sup>, having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions of 16 February 2012<sup>1</sup>,

- having regard to the undertaking given by the Council representative by letter of 1 June 2012 to approve Parliament's position, in accordance with Article 294(4) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union,
- having regard to Rule 55 of its Rules of Procedure,
- having regard to the joint deliberations of the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and of the Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality under Rule 51 of the Rules of Procedure,
- having regard to the report of the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and of the Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality and the opinion of the Committee on Legal Affairs (A7-0244/2012),

1. Adopts its position at first reading hereinafter set out;
2. Calls on the Commission to refer the matter to Parliament again if it intends to amend its proposal substantially or replace it with another text;
3. Instructs its President to forward its position to the Council, the Commission and the national parliaments.

DIRECTIVE 2012/.../EU OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 82(2) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee<sup>1</sup>,

Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions<sup>2</sup>,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure<sup>3</sup>, <sup>3</sup> Position of the European Parliament of ... (not yet published in the Official Journal) and decision of the Council of ... .

Whereas:

- (1) The Union has set itself the objective of maintaining and developing an area of freedom, security and justice, the cornerstone of which is the mutual recognition of judicial decisions in civil and criminal matters.
- (2) The Union is committed to the protection of victims of crime and to the establishment of minimum standards and has adopted Council Framework Decision 2001/220/JHA of 15 March 2001 on the standing of victims in criminal proceedings<sup>4</sup>. Under the Stockholm programme – An open and secure Europe serving and protecting citizens<sup>5</sup>, adopted by the European Council at its meeting on 10 and 11 December 2009, the Commission and the Member States have been asked to examine how to improve legislation and practical support measures for the protection of victims, with attention, support and recognition for all victims, including for victims of terrorism, as a priority.
- (2a) Article 82(2) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU) provides for the establishment of minimum rules applicable in the Member States to facilitate mutual recognition of judgements and judicial decisions and police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters having a cross-border dimension. Point (c) of Article 82(2) TFEU refers to 'the rights of victims of crime' as one of the areas where minimum rules may be established.

- (2b) In its Resolution of 10 June 2011 on a Roadmap for strengthening the rights and protection of victims, in particular in criminal proceedings<sup>6</sup>, the Council stated that action should be taken at Union level in order to strengthen the rights, support and protection of victims of crime. To that end and in accordance with that Resolution, this Directive aims to revise and supplement the principles set out in Framework Decision 2001/220/JHA and to take significant steps forward in the level of protection of victims throughout the Union, in particular within the framework of criminal proceedings.
- (3) The Resolution of the European Parliament of 26 November 2009 on the elimination of violence against women<sup>7</sup> called on the Member States to improve their national laws and policies to combat all forms of violence against women and to act in order to tackle the causes of violence against women, not least by employing preventive measures, and called on the Union to guarantee the right to assistance and support for all victims of violence.
- (3a) The Resolution of the European Parliament of 5 April 2011 on priorities and outline of a new EU policy framework to fight violence against women<sup>8</sup> proposes a strategy to combat violence against women, domestic violence and female genital mutilation as a basis for future legislative criminal-law instruments against gender-based violence, including a framework to fight violence against women (policy, prevention, protection, prosecution, provision and partnership) to be followed up by an EU action plan. International regulation within this area includes United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) of 1979, the CEDAW Committee's recommendations and decisions, and the Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence adopted on 7 April 2011.

- (3b) Directive 2011/99/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December 2011 on the European protection order<sup>9</sup> [and Regulation (EU) No .../2012 on mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters<sup>10</sup>] establish mechanisms for the mutual recognition of protection measures between Member States. Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December 2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography<sup>11</sup> and Directive 2011/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 April 2011 on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings and protecting its victims<sup>12</sup> address the specific needs of the particular categories of victims of child sexual abuse, sexual exploitation and child pornography and human trafficking.
- (3c) Framework Decision 2002/475/JHA of the European Council of 13 June 2002 on combating terrorism recognises that terrorism constitutes one of the most serious violations of the principles on which the Union is founded and based on, including the principles of democracy and the free exercise of human rights.

- (5) Crime is a wrong against society as well as a violation of the individual rights of victims. As such, victims should be recognised and treated in a respectful, sensitive and professional manner without discrimination of any kind based on any ground such as race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age, gender, gender expression, gender identity, sexual orientation, residence status or state of health. In all contacts with any competent authority operating within the context of criminal proceedings, and any service coming into contact with victims, such as victim support service or restorative justice service victims' personal situation and immediate needs, age, gender, possible disability and level of maturity should be taken into account while fully respecting their physical, mental and moral integrity. They should be protected from secondary and repeat victimisation and from intimidation, should receive appropriate support to facilitate their recovery and should be provided with sufficient access to justice.
- (5a) This Directive does not deal with the conditions of the residence of the victims of crime in the territory of the Member States. Member States should take the necessary measures to ensure that the rights provided for in this Directive are not made conditional on the victim's legal residence status in their territory or on the victim's citizenship or nationality. Reporting a crime and participating in criminal proceedings does not create any rights regarding the residence status of the victim.
- (6) This Directive aims to amend and expand the provisions of Framework Decision 2001/220/JHA. Since the amendments to be made are substantial in number and nature, that Framework Decision should in the interests of clarity be replaced in its entirety.

- (7) This Directive respects fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union. In particular it seeks to promote the right to dignity, life, physical and mental integrity, freedom and security, the right to non-discrimination, the right to respect for private and family life, the principle of equality between men and women, the right to property, ■ the rights of the child, the elderly and persons with disabilities, and the right to a fair trial.
- (8) This Directive lays down minimum rules. Member States may extend the rights set out in this Directive in order to provide a higher level of protection.
- (8a) The rights provided for in this Directive are without prejudice to the rights of the offender. The use of the term "offender" is without prejudice to the presumption of innocence and refers to suspected and accused persons, when it refers to stages prior to a possible acknowledgement of guilt or the conviction. However, it covers also the state when a person has been convicted of having committed a crime.
- (8b) This Directive applies in relation to criminal offences committed in the European Union and to criminal proceedings that take place in the Union. It only confers rights on victims of extra-territorial offences in relation to criminal proceedings that take place in the Union. Complaints made to competent authorities outside the Union, such as embassies, do not trigger the obligations set out in this Directive.
- (8c) In applying the provisions of this Directive, children's best interests must be a primary consideration, in accordance with the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union and the 1989 United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. Child victims should be considered and treated as the full bearers of rights provided for in this Directive and should be entitled to exercise those rights in a manner that takes into account their capacity to form their own views.
- (8d) In applying the provisions of this Directive, Member States should ensure that victims with disabilities fully enjoy the rights under this Directive on an equal basis with others, including by facilitating the accessibility to premises, where criminal proceedings are conducted as well as access to information.

- (8e) Victims of terrorism have suffered attacks that are intended ultimately to harm society. They may therefore need special attention, support and social recognition due to the particular nature of the crime that has been committed against them. Victims of terrorism can be under significant public scrutiny and often need social recognition and respectful treatment by society. Member States should therefore pay special attention to victims of terrorism, and should seek to protect their dignity and security.
- (8f) Violence that is directed against a person because of his or her gender, gender identity or gender expression or affects persons of a particular gender disproportionately is understood as gender-based violence. It may result in physical, sexual, psychological or economic harm to or in suffering of the victim. Gender-based violence is understood as a form of discrimination and a violation of the fundamental freedoms of the victim and includes, but is not limited to violence in close relationships, sexual violence (including rape, sexual assault and harassment), trafficking in human beings and slavery and different forms of harmful practices, such as forced marriages, female genital mutilation and crimes committed in the name of so-called "honour". Women victims of gender-based violence and their children often require special support and protection because of a high risk of repeat victimisation and intimidation with these types of crime.

- (8g) When violence is committed in a close relationship, the violence is committed by a person who is a current or former spouse or partner or other family member of the victim, whether or not the perpetrator shares or has shared the same household with the victim. Such violence may cover physical, sexual, psychological or economic violence and may result in physical or mental injury, emotional suffering or economic loss. Violence in close relationships is a serious and often hidden social problem which may cause systematic psychological and physical trauma with severe consequences because of it being committed by a person the victim should be able to trust. Victims of violence in close relationships may therefore be in need of specific protection measures. Women are affected disproportionately by this type of violence and the situation can be more severe if the woman is dependent on the offender financially, socially or as regards her right to residence.
- (9) A person should be considered to be a victim regardless of whether an offender is identified, apprehended, prosecuted or convicted and regardless of the familial relationship between the offender and that person. Family members of victims may also be harmed as a result of the crime. In particular family members of a person whose death has been caused directly by a criminal offence may be harmed as a result of the crime. Such indirect victims may therefore also benefit from protection under this Directive. However, Member States may establish procedures to limit the number of family members who may benefit from the rights under this Directive. In the case of a child, the child himself/herself or the holder of the parental responsibility on behalf of the child should be entitled to exercise the rights provided for by this Directive, unless this is not in the best interests of the child. This Directive is without prejudice to any national administrative procedures and formalities confirming that a person is a victim.

- (9a) The role of victims in the criminal justice system and their possibility of actively participating in criminal proceedings vary in each Member State, depending on the national system, and is determined by one of the following criteria: the national system provides for a legal status as a party to criminal proceedings; the victim is under a legal requirement or is requested to actively participate in criminal proceedings, such as witnesses; and/or the victim has a legal entitlement under national law to actively participate in criminal proceedings and is seeking to do so, where the national system does not provide for a legal status as a party to the criminal proceedings. Member States should determine which of those criteria will be applicable to determine the scope of rights provided for under Articles, where there are references to the role of the victim in the relevant criminal justice system.
- (9b) Information and advice provided by competent authorities, victim support services and restorative justice services should as far as possible be given through a range of media in a manner which can be understood by the victim. This information and advice should be provided in a simple and accessible language. It should also be ensured that the victim can be understood during proceedings. In this respect, the victim's knowledge of the language used to provide information, their age, maturity, intellectual and emotional capacities, literacy levels and any mental or physical impairment should be taken into account. Particular account should be taken of difficulties in understanding or communicating which may be due to a disability of some kind, such as hearing or speech impediments. Equally, limitations on a victim's ability to communicate information should be taken into account during criminal proceedings.
- (9c) The moment where a complaint is made should for the purpose of this Directive be considered as falling within the context of the criminal proceeding. This also includes situations where authorities ex officio initiate criminal proceedings as a result of a criminal offence suffered by a victim.

- (9d) Information on reimbursement of expenses may, from the time of the first contact with a competent authority, be provided e.g. in a leaflet stating the basic conditions. Member States are not required, at this early stage of the criminal proceedings, to decide on whether the victim in question fulfils the conditions for reimbursement of expenses.
- (9e) When reporting a crime, victims should receive a written acknowledgement from the police, stating the basic elements of the crime, such as the type of crime, the time and place, damage and harm caused by the crime, etc. This acknowledgement should include a file number and the time and place for reporting of the crime in order to potentially serve as physical documentation that the crime has been reported, e.g. in relation to insurance claims.
- (9f) Without prejudice to the rules on statute of limitation, the delayed reporting of a criminal offence, due to fear of retaliation, humiliation or stigmatisation, should not result in refusing acknowledgement of the victim's complaint.
- (10) When providing information, sufficient detail should be given to ensure that victims are treated in a respectful manner and to enable them to make informed decisions about their participation in proceedings ■ . In this respect, information allowing the victim to know about the current status of any proceedings ■ is particularly important. This is equally relevant for information to enable a victim to decide whether to request a review of a decision not to prosecute. Unless specifically required, the information communicated to the victim may be provided orally or in writing, including through electronic means.
- (10a) Information to a victim should be provided to the last known correspondence address or electronic contact details given to the competent authority by the victim. In exceptional cases, e.g. due to the high number of victims involved in a case, information may be provided through the press, through an official home page of the competent authority or any similar communication channel.

- (10b) Member States should not be obliged to provide information, where disclosure of that information could affect the proper handling of a case or harm a given case or person, or if the Member State considers it contrary to the essential interests of its security.
- (10c) Competent authorities involved should ensure that victims receive updated contact details for communication about their case, unless the victim has expressed a wish not to receive such information.
- (10d) Reference to a "decision" in the context of the right to information, translation and interpretation, should be understood only as a reference to the finding of guilt or otherwise ending criminal proceedings. The reasons of that decision may be provided to the victim either through a copy of the resolution where that decision is included in or through a brief summary of them.
- (10e) The right to information on the time and place of a trial resulting from the complaint of a criminal offence suffered by the victim also applies to information on the time and place of a hearing related to an appeal of a judgment in the case.
- (10f) Specific information on the release or the escape of the offender should be given to victims where they have so requested at least in cases where there might be danger or identified risk of harm to the victims, unless there is an identified risk of harm to the offender which would result from the notification. Where there is an identified risk of harm to the offender which would result from the notification, the competent authority should take into account all risks when determining an appropriate action. The reference to "identified risk of harm to victims" should cover such factors as severity or nature of the crime and risk of retaliation. Therefore, it should not be applied to those situations where petty crimes occurred and thus there is slight possibility of harm to the victim.
- (10g) Victims should receive information on any right to appeal of a decision to release the offender, if such a right exists in national law.

I

- (12) Justice cannot be effectively achieved unless the victims can properly explain the circumstances of the crime they have suffered and provide their evidence in a manner understandable to the competent authorities. It is equally important to ensure the respectful treatment of the victim and to ensure they are able to access their rights. Free of charge interpretation should therefore, in accordance with the role of the victim in the relevant criminal justice system, always be available during questioning of the victim and for their active participation in court hearings. For other aspects of criminal proceedings, the need of interpretation and translation can vary depending on specific issues, the role of the victim and their involvement in proceedings and any specific rights they have. As such interpretation and translation for these other cases need only be provided to the extent necessary for victims to exercise their rights.
- (12a) The victim should have the right to challenge a decision finding that there is no need for translation or interpretation, in accordance with procedures in national law. That right does not entail the obligation for Member States to provide for a separate mechanism or complaint procedure in which such decision may be challenged and should not unreasonably prolong the criminal proceedings. An internal review of the decision would suffice.
- (12b) The fact that a victim only speaks a language, which is rarely spoken, should not in itself be grounds to decide that translation or interpretation would unreasonably prolong the criminal proceedings.
- (13) Support ■ should be ■ available from the moment the authorities are aware of the victim and throughout criminal proceedings and for an appropriate time after such proceedings in accordance with the needs of the victim and the rights under this Directive. Support should be provided through a variety of means, without excessive formalities and through a sufficient geographical distribution to allow all victims ■ opportunity to access such services. Victims who have suffered considerable harm due to the severity and gravity of the crime may require specialist support services ■.

(13a) *Those who are most vulnerable or who find themselves in particularly exposed situations, such as persons subjected to repeat violence in close relationships, victims of gender-based violence, or persons who fall victim to other types of crimes in a Member State of which they are not nationals or residents, are in need of specialised support and legal protection. Specialised support services should be based on an integrated and targeted approach which should notably take into account the specific needs of victims, the severity of the harm suffered as a result of a criminal offence, as well as the relationship between victims, offenders, children and their wider social environment. A main task of these services and their staff, which play an important role in supporting the victim to recover from and overcome potential harm or trauma as a result of a criminal offence, should be to inform victims about their rights covered by the scope of this Directive and to contribute to that they can take decisions in a supportive environment that treats them with dignity, respect and sensitivity. The types of support that such dedicated services should offer may include but are not limited to providing shelter and safe accommodation, immediate medical support, referral to medical and forensic examination for evidence in cases of rape and sexual assault, short and long-term psychological counselling, trauma care, legal counselling, access to advocacy and specific services for children as direct or indirect victims. Victim support services are not by definition expected to provide extensive specialist and professional expertise themselves. If necessary, victim support services should assist victims in calling on existing professional support, for instance psychologists.

(14) Although the provision of support should not be dependent on victims making a complaint of an offence to a competent authority such as the police, such authorities are often best placed to inform victims of the possibility of support. Member States are therefore encouraged to establish appropriate conditions to enable the referral of victims to victim support services, including by ensuring that data protection requirements can be and are adhered to. Repeat referrals should be avoided.

(14a) *The right of victims to be heard should also be considered to have been granted where the victims may make statements or explanations in writing.

- (14b) The right of child victims to be heard in criminal proceedings should not be precluded solely on the basis that the victim is a child or of the child's age.
- (15) The right to have the decision not to prosecute reviewed refers to decisions taken by prosecutors and investigative judges or law enforcement authorities such as police officers, but not to the decisions taken by courts. Any review of a decision not to prosecute should be carried out by a different person or authority to that which made the original decision, unless the initial decision not to prosecute was taken by the highest prosecuting authority, against whose decision no review may be made, in which case the review may be carried out by that same authority. The right to review a decision not to prosecute does not concern special procedures, such as proceedings against members of parliament or government, in relation to the exercise of their official position.
- (15a) A decision ending proceedings should cover also situations where the prosecutor decides to withdraw charges or discontinue proceedings.
- (15b) A decision of the prosecutor resulting in an out-of-court settlement and thus ending proceedings, should only exclude victims from the right to have a decision of the prosecutor not to prosecute reviewed, if the settlement imposes a warning or an obligation.

(16) Restorative justice services, including for example victim-offender mediation, family group conferencing and sentencing circles, can be of great benefit to the victim, but require safeguards to prevent any further victimisation. Such services should therefore have as a primary consideration the interests and needs of the victim, repairing the harm done to the victim and avoiding further harm. Factors such as the type, nature and gravity of the crime, the ensuing degree of trauma, the repeat violation of a victim's physical, sexual, or psychological integrity, power imbalances, and the age, maturity or intellectual capacity of the victim, which could limit or reduce the victim's ability to make an informed choice or could prejudice a positive outcome for the victim, should be taken into consideration in referring a case to and in conducting a restorative process. Private proceedings should in general be confidential, unless agreed otherwise by the parties, or as required by national law due to an overriding public interest. Factors such as threats made or any forms of violence occurring during the process may be considered as requiring disclosure in the public interest.

(16a) Victims should not be expected to incur expenses to participate in criminal proceedings. However, they should not incur unnecessary expenses in doing so. Member States are required to reimburse only necessary expenses, but are not required to reimburse the victims' legal fees. Member States can impose conditions of payment in national law, such as time limits for claiming reimbursement, standard rates for subsistence and travel costs and maximum daily amounts for loss of earnings. The right to reimbursement of expenses in criminal proceedings should not be related to a situation where a victim makes a statement on a criminal offence. Expenses need only be provided to the extent that the victim is obliged or requested by the competent authorities to be present and actively participate in the proceedings.

(16b) Recoverable property which is seized in criminal proceedings should be returned as soon as possible to the victim of the crime, unless there are exceptional conditions, such as a dispute concerning the ownership, the possession of the property or the property itself is illegal. Return of the property should be without prejudice to its legitimate retention for the purpose of other legal proceedings.

- (16c) The right to a decision on compensation from the offender and the relevant applicable procedure should also apply for victims resident in a Member State other than the Member State where the criminal offence occurred.
- (16d) The obligation contained in this Directive to transmit complaints should not affect Member States' competence to institute proceedings and is without prejudice to the rules of conflict of jurisdiction, including on the exchange of information, as laid down in Council Framework Decision 2009/948/JHA of 30 November 2009 on prevention and settlement of conflicts of exercise of jurisdiction in criminal proceedings<sup>13</sup>.
- (16e) If the victim has left the territory of the Member State where the criminal offence occurred, that Member State should no longer be obliged to provide assistance, support and protection except for what is directly related to any criminal proceedings it is conducting regarding the criminal offence in question, such as special protection measures during court proceedings. The Member State of the victim's residence should provide assistance, support and protection required for the victim's need to recover.
- (16f) Measures to protect the safety and dignity of victims and their family members from retaliation, intimidation, repeat or further victimisation, such as interim injunctions or protection or restraining orders, should be available.
- (16g) The risk of further victimisation either by the offender or as a result of participation in criminal proceedings should be limited by carrying out proceedings in a co-ordinated manner which treats victims with respect and enables them to establish trust in authorities. Interaction with authorities should be as easy as possible whilst limiting the number of unnecessary interactions the victim has with them through for example video recording of interviews and allowing its use in court proceedings. As wide a range of measures as possible should be made available to practitioners to prevent distress to the victim during court proceedings in particular as a result of visual contact with the offender, his family, associates or members of the public. To that end, Member States are encouraged to introduce, especially in court buildings and police stations, feasible and practical measures enabling the facilities to include amenities such as separate entrances, waiting areas, etc., for victims. In addition Member States should, to the extent possible, plan the criminal proceedings so that contacts between the offender and the victims and their family members are avoided, such as by summoning the victim and the offender to hearings at different times.

- (16h) Protecting the privacy of the victim can be an important means of preventing further victimisation and can be achieved through a range of measures including non-disclosure or limitations on the disclosure of information concerning the identity and whereabouts of the victim. Such protection is particularly important for child victims, including non-disclosure of the name of the child. However, there might be cases where exceptionally the child can benefit if information is being revealed or even publicised widely, e.g. where a child has been abducted. Measures to protect the privacy and images of victims and of their family members should always be consistent with Articles 6 and 10 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms on the right to a fair trial and the freedom of expression.
- (17) Some victims are particularly at risk during criminal proceedings to secondary and repeat victimisation and to intimidation by the offender ■. Such risks derive broadly ■ from the personal characteristics of the victim, the type or nature of the crime and the circumstances of the crime. Only through individual assessments, carried out at the earliest opportunity, may these risks be effectively identified. Such assessments should be carried out for all victims to determine whether they are at risk of further victimisation and what specific protection measures they require.

- (18) Individual assessments should take into account the personal characteristics of the victim such as age, gender and gender identity or expression, ethnicity, race, religion, sexual orientation, health, disability, residence status, communication difficulties, relationship to or dependence on the offender, previous experience of crime, the type or nature of the crime or the circumstances of the crime such as hate crime, bias crime or crime committed with a discriminatory motive, sexual violence, violence in close relationships, where the offender was in a position of control, the victims residence is in a high crime or gang dominated area, or whether the victim is a foreigner.
- (18a) Victims of human trafficking, terrorism, organised crime, violence in close relationships, sexual violence or exploitation, gender-based violence, hate crime, victims with disabilities and child victims tend to experience a high rate of secondary or repeat victimisation or intimidation. Particular care should be taken when assessing whether such victims are at risk of further victimisation and there should be a strong presumption that those victims will benefit from specific protection measures.
- (19) Victims who have been identified as vulnerable to secondary and repeat victimisation or to intimidation should be offered appropriate measures to protect them during criminal proceedings. The exact nature of such measures should be determined through the individual assessment taking into account the wish of the victim. The extent of any such measure should be determined without prejudice to the rights of the defence and in accordance with rules of judicial discretion. The victims' concerns and fears in relation to proceedings should be a key factor in determining whether they need any particular measure.
- (19a) Immediate operational needs and constraints may make it impossible to ensure for example that the same police officer consistently interview the victim; illness, maternity or parental leave are examples of such constraints. Furthermore, premises specially designed for interviews with victims may not be available due to renovation, etc. In the event of such operational or practical constraints, a special measure envisaged following an individual assessment may not be possible to provide on a case-by-case basis.

- (23) Where, in accordance with this Directive, a guardian █ or a representative is to be appointed for a child, those roles may be performed by the same person or by a legal person, an institution or an authority.
- (24) Any officials involved in criminal proceedings who are likely to come into personal contact with victims should be able to access and receive appropriate training so they are able to identify █ victims and their needs and deal with them in a sensible, respectful, professional and non-discriminatory manner both through initial and ongoing training and to a level appropriate to their contact with victims. Practitioners who are likely to be involved in the individual assessment to identify victims' specific protection needs and to determine their need for special protection measures should receive specific training on how to carry out such an assessment. Member States should ensure this training requirement for police services, staff within the judicial authorities. Equally, training should be promoted for lawyers, prosecutors and judges and for practitioners who provide victim support and restorative justice services. This requirement should include training on the specific services to which victims should be referred or specialist training where their work focuses on victims with specific needs and specific psychological training as appropriate. Where relevant, such training should be gender-sensitive. Member States' actions on training should be complemented by guidelines, recommendations and exchange of best practices in accordance with Council Resolution of 10 June 2011.

(25) Member States should encourage and work closely with civil society organisations, including recognised and active non-governmental organisations working with victims of crime, in particular in policy-making initiatives, information and awareness-raising campaigns, research and education programmes and in training, as well as in monitoring and evaluating the impact of measures to support and protect victims of crime. For victims of crime to receive the proper degree of attention, support and protection, public services should work in a coordinated manner and be involved at all administrative levels – at Union level, and at national, regional and local levels. Victims should be assisted in finding and addressing the right authorities in order to avoid repeat referrals. Member States should consider developing multi-agency services, following the principle of ‘sole point of access’ or ‘one-stop shop’, that address victims’ multiple needs when involved in criminal proceedings, including the need to receive information, support, assistance, protection and compensation.

(25a) In order to encourage and facilitate reporting and to allow victims to break the cycle of repeat victimisation, it is essential that reliable support services should be available to victims and that competent authorities are prepared to respond to victims’ reports in a respectful, considerate, equal and professional manner. This could increase victims’ confidence in the criminal justice systems and reduce the number of unreported crimes. Practitioners who are likely to receive complaints from victims about criminal offences are appropriately trained to facilitate reporting, and measures should be put in place to enable or third-party reporting, including by civil society organisations. It should be possible to make use of communication technologies, such as e-mail, video recordings or online electronic forms for filing complaints.

- (25b) Systematic and adequate data collection is recognised as an essential component of effective policy-making in the field of victims' rights covered by the scope of this Directive. In order to facilitate evaluation of the application of this Directive, Member States should communicate to the Commission relevant data related to the application of national procedures on victims of crime, including at least the number, type or nature of the reported crimes and, as far as such data is known and available, the number of the victims, their age and gender. Relevant statistical data can include judicial data recorded by the judicial authorities and by law enforcement agencies and, as far as possible, administrative data compiled by health care and social welfare services and by public and non-governmental victim support, restorative justice and other organisations working with victims of crime. Judicial data can include information on reported crime, number of cases that are investigated, prosecuted and sentenced. Service-based administrative data can include, as far as possible, data on how victims are using services provided by government agencies and public and private support organisations, such as number of referrals by police to victim support services, number of victims that request support, receive and do not receive support or restorative justice.
- (26) Since the objective of this Directive, namely establishing ■ minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, cannot be sufficiently achieved by Member States acting unilaterally, either at national, regional or local level, but can rather, by reason of the scale and potential effects be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve that objective.

- (27) Personal data processed when implementing this Directive should be protected in accordance with Council Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA of 27 November 2008 on the protection of personal data processed in the framework of police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters and in accordance with the principles laid down in the Council of Europe Convention of 28 January 1981 for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data, which all Member States have ratified.
- (28) This Directive shall not affect more far reaching provisions contained in other Union acts which address the specific needs of particular victims, such as victims of human trafficking and victims of child sexual abuse, sexual exploitation and child pornography, in a more targeted manner.
- (29) In accordance with Article 3 of the Protocol on the position of the United Kingdom and Ireland in respect of the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, the United Kingdom and Ireland have notified their wish to participate in the adoption and application of this Directive.
- (30) In accordance with Articles 1 and 2 of the Protocol on the position of Denmark, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, Denmark is not taking part in the adoption of this Directive and is ■ not bound by it or subject to its application,

HAVE ADOPTED THIS DIRECTIVE:

Chapter 1

INTRODUCTORY PROVISIONS

Article 1

Objectives

1. The purpose of this Directive is to ensure that ▯ victims of crime, as defined in Article 2, receive appropriate support and protection ▯ and are able to participate in criminal proceedings ▯.

Member States shall ensure that victims are recognised and treated in a respectful, sensitive, individual, professional and non-discriminatory manner ▯, in all contacts with ▯ victim support or restorative justice service or any competent authority, operating within the context of criminal proceedings. The rights provided for in this Directive shall apply to victims in a non-discriminatory manner, including with respect to their residence status.

2. Member States shall ensure that in the application of this Directive, where the victim is a child, the child's best interests shall be a primary consideration and shall be assessed on an individual basis. A child sensitive approach, taking due account of the child's age, level of maturity and the child's views, needs and concerns, shall prevail in all interactions. The child and his/her legal representative, if any, shall be informed of any measures or rights specifically focussed on the rights of the child.

Article 2

Definitions

1. For the purposes of this Directive:

(a) 'victim' means :

- (i) a natural person who has suffered harm, including physical or mental injury, emotional suffering or economic loss, directly caused by a criminal offence;
- (ii) ■ family members of a person whose death was directly caused by a criminal offence and who have suffered harm as a result;

(b) 'family members' means the spouse, the person who is living with the victim in a committed intimate relationship on a stable and continuous basis having a joint household, the relatives in direct line, the siblings and the dependants of the victim;

(e) 'restorative justice services' means any process whereby the victim and the offender are enabled, if they freely consent, to participate actively in the resolution of matters arising from the crime through the help of an impartial third party;

(f) 'child' means any person below 18 years of age.

2. Member States may establish procedures:

- (a) to limit the number of family members who may benefit from the rights under this Directive taking into account the individual circumstances of each case; and
- (b) in cases falling within Article 2(1)(a)(ii), to determine which family members have priority in relation to the exercise of the rights under this Directive.

Chapter 2

PROVISION OF INFORMATION AND SUPPORT

Article 2a

Right to understand and to be understood

1. Member States shall take appropriate measures to assist victims to understand and to be understood from the first contact and during any necessary interaction they have with any competent authorities in the context of criminal proceedings, including where information is provided by such authorities.
2. Member States shall ensure that communications with victims are offered in a simple and accessible language, either orally or in writing. Such communications shall take into account personal characteristics of the victim including any disability which may affect their ability to understand or to communicate.
3. Unless this would be contrary to the interests of the victim or the course of proceedings would be prejudiced, Member States shall allow victims to be accompanied by a person of their choice in the first contact with competent authorities, where the victim requires assistance to understand and to be understood due to the impact of the crime.

Article 3

Right to receive information from first contact with a competent authority

1. Member States shall ensure that victims are offered the following information, without unnecessary delay, from their first contact with the competent authority to enable them to access their rights provided in this Directive:
  - (a) the type of support they can obtain and from whom, including where relevant basic information about access to medical support, any specialist support, including psychological support, and alternative accommodation;

- (d) procedures concerning the making of a complaint of an offence and their role in connection with such procedures;
  - (e) how and under what conditions they can obtain protection, including protection measures;
  - (f) how and under what conditions they can access legal advice, legal aid or any other sort of advice;
  - (g) how and under what conditions they can access compensation;
  - (ga) how and under what conditions they are entitled to interpretation and translation;
  - (h) if they are resident in a Member State other than that where the offence occurred, any special measures, procedures or arrangements, which are available to ■ protect their interests in the Member State, where the contact is made;
  - (i) any procedures for making complaints where their rights are not respected by the competent authority operating within the context of criminal proceedings;
  - (j) contact details for communications about their case;
  - (ja) available restorative justice services;
  - (jb) how and under what conditions they can have expenses incurred as a result of their participation in the criminal proceedings reimbursed.
2. The extent or detail of that information may be varied based on the specific needs and personal circumstances of the victim and the type or nature of the crime. Additional details may also be provided at later stages depending on the needs of the victim and its relevance at each stage of proceedings.

Article 3a

Right of victims when making a complaint

1. Member States shall ensure that victims receive written acknowledgement stating the basic elements relating to the crime of any formal complaint of a criminal offence made by them to the competent authority of the Member State.
2. Member States shall ensure that victims who wish to make a complaint of a criminal offence and who do not understand or speak the language of the competent authority shall be enabled to make the complaint in a language the victim understands or by receiving the necessary linguistic assistance.
3. Member States shall ensure that victims, who do not understand or speak the language of the competent authority, receive translation, free of charge, of the written acknowledgement of the complaint, provided for in paragraph 1, if they so request, in a language understood by the victims.

Article 4

Right to receive information about their case

1. Member States shall ensure that victims are notified without unnecessary delay of their right to receive, and that they, if they so request, receive the following information on █ the criminal proceedings instituted as a result of the complaint of a criminal offence suffered by the victim:
  - (a) any decision not to proceed with or to end an investigation or not to prosecute the offender;
  - (b) the time and place of the trial, and the nature of the charges.
- 1a. Member States shall ensure that victims, in accordance with their role in the relevant criminal justice system, are notified without unnecessary delay of their right to receive, and that they, if they so request, receive the following information on the criminal proceedings instituted as a result of the complaint of a criminal offence suffered by the victim:

- (a) any final judgment in a trial █ ;
- (b) information enabling the victim to know about the state of █ the criminal proceedings █ , unless in exceptional cases the proper handling of the case may be adversely affected.

- 1b. Information provided for under paragraph 1(-a) and 1a(a) shall include either reasons or a brief summary of reasons for the decision in question except in the case of a confidential or jury decision where reasons are not provided as a matter of national law.
- 1c. The wish of victims whether or not to receive information shall bind the competent authority, unless this information must be provided due to the entitlement of the victim to active participation in the criminal proceedings. Member States shall allow victims to modify their wish at any moment, which shall then be taken into account.
- 2. Member States shall ensure that victims are offered the opportunity to be notified without unnecessary delay, when the person remanded in custody, prosecuted or sentenced for offences concerning them is released from or has escaped detention. Furthermore, victims shall be informed of any relevant measures issued for their protection in case of release or escape.
- 3. Victims shall receive the information provided for in paragraph 2, if they so request, at least in cases where there might be danger or identified risk of harm to the victims, unless there is an identified risk of harm to the offender which would result from the notification.

Article 6

Right to interpretation and translation

1. Member States shall ensure that victims who do not understand or speak the language of the criminal proceedings concerned are provided, if they so request, with free of charge interpretation, in accordance with their role in the relevant criminal justice system in criminal proceedings, at least during any interviews or questioning of the victim during criminal proceedings before investigative and judicial authorities, including during police questioning, and interpretation for their active participation in court hearings and any necessary interim hearings.

3. Without prejudice to the rights of the defence and in accordance with rules of judicial discretion, communication technology such as videoconferencing, telephone or internet may be used, unless the physical presence of the interpreter is required in order for the victim to properly exercise their rights or understand the proceedings.

4. Member States shall ensure that victims who do not understand or speak the language of the criminal proceedings concerned shall, in accordance with their role in the relevant criminal justice system in criminal proceedings, receive translations in a language understood by the victims, if they so request, free of charge, of ■ information essential to the victims' exercise of their rights in criminal proceedings, to the extent that such information is made available to the victims, at least any decision ending the criminal proceedings related to the criminal offence suffered by the victim, and upon request of the victim, reasons or a brief summary of ■ reasons for such decision, except in the case of confidential or jury decision where reasons are not provided as a matter of national law.

- 4a. Member States shall ensure that victims, who are entitled to information on the time and the place of the trial, in accordance with Article 4(1), and who do not understand the language of the competent authority, receive a translation of this information to which they are entitled, if they so request.

- 4b. There shall be no requirement to translate passages of essential documents which are not relevant for the purposes of enabling victims to actively participate in the criminal proceedings. Victims may submit a reasoned request to consider a document as essential.
- 4c. As an exception to the general rules established in paragraphs 1, 3 and 4, an oral translation or oral summary of essential documents may be provided instead of a written translation on condition that such oral translation or oral summary does not prejudice the fairness of the proceedings.
- 5.. Member States shall ensure that the competent authority assesses whether victims need translation and assistance of an interpreter as provided for under paragraph 1 and 4. Victims may challenge a decision not to provide translation or interpretation. The procedural rules shall be determined by national law.
- 5a. Translation and interpretation, as well as any consideration of a challenge of a decision not to provide translation or interpretation, shall not unreasonable prolong the criminal proceedings.

Article 7

Right to access victim support services

1. Member States shall ensure that victims █ in accordance with their needs █ have access to free of charge, confidential victim support services acting in the interests of the victims before, during and for an appropriate time after criminal proceedings. Family members shall have access to victim support services in accordance with their needs and the degree of harm suffered as a result of the crime committed against the victim.
2. Member States shall facilitate the referral of victims, by the competent authority that received the complaint and by other relevant agencies, to victim support services.

3. Member States shall take measures to establish free of charge and confidential specialist support services in addition to, or as an integrated part of, general victim support services, or by enabling victim support organisations to call on existing professional agencies providing such specialist support. Victims, in accordance with their specific needs, shall have access to such services and family members shall have access in accordance with their specific needs and the degree of harm suffered as a result of the crime committed against the victim.
- 3a. Victim support services and any specialist support services may be set up as public or non-governmental organisations and may be organised on a professional or voluntary basis.
- 3b. Member States shall ensure that access to any victim support services is not dependent on a victim making a formal complaint of a criminal offence to a competent authority.

Article 7a

Support available from victim support services

1. Victim support services, as set out in Article 7, shall as a minimum provide:
  - (a) information, advice and support relevant to the rights of victims including on accessing state compensation schemes for criminal injuries, and their role in criminal proceedings including preparation for attendance at the trial;
  - (b) information on or direct referral to ■ any relevant specialist victim support services in place;
  - (c) emotional and, where available psychological support;
  - (d) advice relating to financial and practical issues ■ arising from the crime;

- (e) unless otherwise provided by other public or private services, advice relating to the risk of retaliation, intimidation and repeat or further victimisation and how to prevent or avoid it.
2. Member States shall encourage victim support services to pay particular attention to the specific needs of victims who have suffered considerable harm due to the severity and gravity of the crime.
3. Unless otherwise provided by other public or private services, specialist support services referred to in Article 7(3), shall as a minimum develop and provide:
- (a) shelters or any other appropriate interim accommodation for victims in need of a safe place due to an imminent risk of retaliation, intimidation or repeat or further victimisation;
- (b) targeted and integrated support for victims with specific needs, such as victims of sexual violence, victims of gender-based violence and victims of violence in close relationships, including trauma support and counselling.

Chapter 3

PARTICIPATION IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

I

Article 9

Right to be heard

1. Member States shall ensure that victims may be heard during criminal proceedings and may supply evidence. When a child victim is to be heard due account shall be taken to the age and maturity of the child.
2. The procedural rules under which victims may be heard during criminal proceedings and may supply evidence shall be determined by national law.

Article 10

Rights in the event of a decision not to prosecute

1. Member States shall ensure that victims, in accordance with their role in the relevant criminal justice system, have the right to a review of a decision not to prosecute the criminal offence suffered by the victim. The procedural rules for such a review shall be determined by national law.
- 1a. Where, in accordance with national law, the victim's role in the relevant criminal justice system will be established only after a decision to prosecute the offender has been taken, Member States shall ensure that at least the victims of serious criminal offences have the right to a review of a decision not to prosecute the criminal offence suffered by the victim. The procedural rules for such a review shall be determined by national law.
2. Member States shall ensure that victims are notified without unnecessary delay of their right to receive, and that they, if they so request, receive sufficient information to decide whether to request a review of any decision not to prosecute.
- 2a. In case the initial decision not to prosecute is taken by the highest prosecuting authority against whose decision no review may be made under national law, the right to review may be carried out by the same authority.
- 2b. Paragraphs 1, 2 and 2a shall not apply to a decision of the prosecutor not to prosecute, if such a decision results in an out-of-court settlement, insofar as the national law provides for such a possibility.

Article 11

Right to safeguards in the context of ■ restorative justice services

1. Member States shall take measures to safeguard the victim from intimidation or further victimisation, to be applied when providing ■ restorative justice services, if any. Such measures shall ensure that the victim, who chooses to participate in restorative justice processes, has access to safe and competent restorative justice services and shall as a minimum include the following:
  - (a) ■ restorative justice services are used only if they are in the interest of the victim, subject to any safety considerations, and shall be based on the victim's free and informed consent; this consent may be withdrawn at any time;
  - (b) before agreeing to participate in the process, the victim is provided with full and unbiased information about the process and the potential outcomes as well as information about the procedures for supervising the implementation of any agreement;
  - (c) the ■ offender must have acknowledged the basic facts of a case;
  - (d) any agreement should be arrived at voluntarily and could be taken into account in any further criminal proceedings;
  - (e) discussions in ■ restorative justice processes that are not conducted in public are confidential and are not subsequently disclosed, except with the agreement of the parties or as required by national law due to an overriding public interest.
2. Member States shall facilitate the referral of cases, appropriate for such measures, to ■ restorative justice services, including through the establishment of procedures or guidelines on the conditions for referral.

Article 12

Right to legal aid

Member States shall ensure that victims have access ■ to legal aid, where they have the status of parties to criminal proceedings. The conditions or procedural rules under which victims may access legal aid shall be determined by national law.

Article 13

Right to reimbursement of expenses

Member States shall ■ afford victims, who participate in criminal proceedings, the possibility of reimbursement of expenses incurred as a result of their active participation in criminal proceedings, in accordance with their role in the relevant criminal justice system. The conditions or procedural rules under which victims may be reimbursed shall be determined by national law.

Article 14

Right to the return of property

Member States shall ensure that following a decision by a competent authority recoverable property ■ which is seized in the course of criminal proceedings is returned to the victims without delay, unless required for the purpose of criminal proceedings. The conditions or procedural rules under which such property is returned shall be determined by national law.

Article 15

Right to decision on compensation from the offender in the course of criminal proceedings

1. Member States shall ensure that, in the course of criminal proceedings, victims are entitled to obtain a decision on compensation by the offender, within a reasonable time, except where national law provides for such a decision to be made in other legal proceedings.

2. Member States shall promote measures to encourage offenders to provide adequate compensation to victims.

Article 16

Rights of victims resident in another Member State

1. Member States shall ensure that their competent authorities can take appropriate measures to minimise the difficulties faced where the victim is a resident of a Member State other than that where the offence occurs, particularly with regard to the organisation of the proceedings. For this purpose, the authorities of the Member State where the crime took place shall, in particular, be in a position:
  - (a) to take a statement from the victim immediately after the complaint of the criminal offence is made to the competent authority;
  - (b) to have recourse to the extent possible to the provisions on video conferencing and telephone conference calls laid down in the Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters between the Member States of the European Union of 29 May 2000<sup>14</sup> for the purpose of hearing victims resident abroad.
2. Member States shall ensure that victims of criminal offences in Member States other than the one where they reside may make a complaint to the competent authorities of the Member State of residence, if they are unable to do so in the Member State where the offence is committed or, in the event of a serious offence determined by national law of that State, if they do not wish to do so.
3. Member States shall ensure that the competent authority to which the complaint is made transmits it without delay to the competent authority in the territory in which the criminal offence was committed, if the competence has not been exercised.

Chapter 4

■ PROTECTION OF VICTIMS AND RECOGNITION OF VICTIMS WITH SPECIFIC PROTECTION NEEDS

Article 17

Right to protection

Without prejudice to the rights of the defence, Member States shall ensure that measures are available to protect the safety of victims and their family members from retaliation, intimidation, repeat or further victimisation, including against the risk of psychological or emotional harm and to protect the dignity of victims during questioning and when testifying. When necessary, the right to protection shall also include procedures established by national law for the physical protection of victims and their family members.

Article 17a

Right to avoidance of contact between victim and offender

- 1. Member States shall establish the necessary conditions to enable avoidance of contact between victims and their family members, where necessary, and offender within premises where criminal proceedings are conducted unless the criminal proceedings require such contact.*
- 2. Member States shall ensure that new court premises have separate waiting areas for victims.*

Article 17b

Right to protection of victims during criminal investigations

Without prejudice to the rights of the defence and in accordance with rules of judicial discretion, Member States shall ensure that during criminal investigations:

- (a) when victims are to be interviewed, the interviews shall be conducted without unjustified delay after the complaint of a criminal offence has been made to the competent authorities;
- (b) the number of interviews with victims is kept to a minimum and interviews are carried out only where strictly necessary for the purposes of criminal investigations;
- (c) victims may be accompanied by their legal representative and a person of their choice, unless a reasoned decision has been made to the contrary in respect of one or both of these persons;
- (d) medical examination for the purpose of criminal proceedings is kept to a minimum and is carried out only where strictly necessary for this purpose.

Article 17c

Right to protection of privacy

1. Member States shall ensure that competent authorities may adopt during the criminal proceedings appropriate measures to protect the privacy, including personal characteristics taken into account in the individual assessment provided for under Article 18, and images of victims and of their family members. Furthermore, Member States shall ensure that competent authorities may take all lawful measures to prevent public dissemination of any information that could lead to the identification of a child victim.
2. In order to protect victims' privacy, personal integrity and personal data, Member States shall, with respect for media freedom and freedom of expression, encourage the media to pursue self-regulatory measures.

Individual assessment of victims to identify specific protection needs

1. Member States shall ensure that victims receive a timely and individual assessment, in accordance with national procedures, to identify specific protection needs and to determine whether and to what extent they would benefit from special measures in the course of criminal proceedings, as provided under Article 21, due to their being particularly vulnerable to secondary and repeat victimisation or to intimidation.
2. The assessment shall particularly take into account:
  - (a) the personal characteristics of the victim;
  - (b) the type or nature of the crime; and
  - (ba) the circumstances of the crime.
- 2a. In the context of the individual assessment, particular attention shall be paid to victims who have suffered considerable harm due to the severity and gravity of the crime, victims who have suffered a crime committed with a bias or discriminatory motive, which could notably be related to their personal characteristics, and victims whose relationship to and dependence upon the perpetrator make them particularly vulnerable. In this regard, victims of terrorism, organised crime, human trafficking, gender-based violence, violence in close-relationship, sexual violence or exploitation, hate crime and victims with disabilities shall be duly considered.
3. For the purposes of this Directive, child victims shall always be presumed to have specific protection needs due to them being vulnerable to secondary and repeat victimisation or to intimidation. To determine whether and to what extent they should benefit special measures as provided under Articles 22 and 23 they shall receive an individual assessment as provided in paragraph 1.
5. The extent of the assessment may be adapted according to the severity of the crime and the degree of apparent harm suffered by the victim.

- 5a. The individual assessment shall be carried out with close involvement of the victims and take into account their wishes including where they do not wish to benefit from special measures.
- 5b. If the elements for the individual assessment have changed significantly, Member States shall ensure that the individual assessment referred to in paragraph 1 is updated throughout the criminal proceedings.

Article 21

Right to protection of  victims with specific protection needs during criminal proceedings

1. Without prejudice to the rights of the defence and in accordance with rules of judicial discretion, Member States shall ensure that  victims who shall benefit from specific measures identified as a result of an individual assessment may benefit from the measures provided for in paragraphs 2 and 3. A special measure envisaged following the individual assessment may not be provided if operational or practical constraints make this impossible, or where there is a an urgent need to interview the victim and failure to do so could harm the victim, another person or the proceedings.
2. The following special measures shall be available to victims identified in accordance with Article 18 during criminal investigations:
  - (a) interviews with the victim carried out in premises designed or adapted for that purpose;
  - (b) interviews with the victim carried out by or through professionals trained for that purpose;
  - (c) all interviews with the victim are conducted by the same persons unless this is contrary to the good administration of justice;
  - (d) all interviews with victims of sexual violence, gender-based violence or violence in close relationships, unless conducted by a public prosecutor or a judge, are conducted by a person of the same sex, if the victim wishes so, and if the course of proceedings will not be prejudiced.

3. The following measures shall be available for victims identified in accordance with Article 18 during court proceedings:
  - (a) measures to avoid visual contact between victims and offenders including during the giving of evidence, by appropriate means including the use of communication technologies;
  - (b) measures to ensure that the victim may be heard in the courtroom without being present, notably through the use of appropriate communication technologies;
  - (c) measures to avoid unnecessary questioning concerning the victim's private life not related to the criminal offence; and
  - (d) measures allowing a hearing to take place without the presence of the public.

Article 22

Right to protection of child victims during criminal proceedings

1. In addition to the measures provided for in Article 21, Member States shall ensure that where the victim is a child:
  - (a) in criminal investigations, all interviews with the child victim may be audiovisually recorded and such ■ recorded interviews may be used ■ as evidence in criminal court proceedings. The procedural rules for such recordings and the use thereof shall be determined by national law;
  - (b) in criminal investigations and court proceedings, in accordance with the role of victims in the relevant criminal justice system, competent authorities appoint a special representative for child victims where, according to national law, the holders of parental responsibility are precluded from representing the child victim as a result of a conflict of interest between them and the child victim, or where the child victim is unaccompanied or separated from the family;

(ba) where the child victim has the right to legal counsel, the child shall have the right to his/her own legal counsel and representation, in their own name, in proceedings where there is, or could be, a conflict of interest between the child and the parents or other involved parties.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The Rapporteurs welcome the Commission's proposal for a Directive on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, as part of a legislative package which aims at strengthening the rights of victims in the EU and which also includes a proposal for a Regulation on mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters and a communication on strengthening victims' rights in the EU. Since the entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty in 2009 and the guidelines towards a European Area of Freedom, Security and Justice, like the Stockholm Programme envisages, protection of victims of any crime in the EU has been on the top of the EU's agenda.

The Commission's proposal reinforces the need to adopt a comprehensive European legal framework offering all victims of crime, regardless of their legal status, recognition and the widest protection within the territory of the Union. This proposal is partly borne out of the Council Framework decision 2011/220/JHA of 15th of March 2001 regarding the standing of victims in criminal proceedings. The Commission has broadened the rights of all victims of any kind of crime into minimum standards across the EU, granting all victims - irrespective of their nationality or the place where the crime took place - rights to information, right to understand and be understood, right to interpretation and translation, right to access legal aid, rights to access victims support services, the right to be heard, right to restorative justice, right in the event of a decision not to prosecute, right to avoid contact between victim and offender, right to protection of victim during questioning in criminal investigation, amongst others. It is also crucial that the future Directive provides a unified definition of "victim", which grants the status of victim not only to the persons harmed by the offence, but also to close family members

Many proposals in this Directive are welcomed by the Rapporteurs.

Confidence in justice is a priority for all the citizens, especially for victims who experience their rights as unheard and out-of-reach. A common and transparent justice system applicable in all EU Member States is an urgent need if the EU wants to fulfil the Stockholm Programme. This Directive will not just defend victims' rights, give support and protection, but also will help European citizens gain trust in their national judicial system and of their EU neighbours by harmonising these minimum standards.

In keeping with the procedures resulting from implementation of the Treaty of Lisbon, Rule 51 of Parliament's Rules of Procedure allows reports to be drawn up on a cross-cutting basis. This report has benefited from input from the discussions in the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and the Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality as well as from the collaboration between the two Rapporteurs.

General approach - Strengthening victims' rights

In spite of these provisions currently included in the Commission's proposal, more can be done to safeguard the needs of victims in each single Member State. All victims, whatever their background or level of harm they have suffered, need to feel they are taken on board in this Directive. Research and data show that all too often victims do not report a crime, due to fear, uncertainty, a lack of trust or information. Victims, because to their vulnerability, are suffocated by an arduous experience which makes legal procedures hard to cope with. It is therefore important to provide support to victims from the moment harm takes place. Throughout all the phases of the legal process, victims need to be treated with respect, dignity and, in practical terms, in a language they understand.

The Rapporteurs believe certain aspects need to be more emphasized and detailed. Therefore the right to receive information from first contact with a competent authority has been extended and deepened for victims who suffered major trauma. Right to receive information on their case includes that Member States shall provide assistance when information regarding the release of the offender is presented to the victim. Due to possible psychological pressure and for the comfort of the person who suffered violence, the victim should have the right to refuse certain information and dismiss this refusal at any moment.

The victim should be offered free victim support from the moment he or she has suffered harm. This includes their children and family members. Victims support should also be converted into community-based programmes or initiatives promoted by the Member States. A rather broader social acknowledgment of victimisation in general is important to victims, with victim's recovery being connected to the victim's experience of positive reactions from society that show appreciation for the victim's unique state and acknowledge the victim's current difficult situation. The Rapporteurs view that the media should play an important role in stimulating acknowledgment of victimisation in society, while at the same time take appropriate measures to ensure the protection of the private and family life of the victims and their family members in the framework of their information activities.

The Rapporteurs are aware that recommended additional measures for Member States to implement might entail, in certain cases, a re-allocation or an increase of resource mobilisation for national authorities. It is however crucial to remind that, as estimated by the European Commission, the total cost of crime - not only for victims, but also to employers, the state and society as a whole - can be estimated at €233 billion a year in the European Union. These costs result not just from the crime itself but from the lack of appropriate support to the victim to help them recover and to cope with criminal proceedings. Any effort to strengthen victims' rights and to provide adequate support services should therefore be seen as a cost-effective measure which will positively contribute to facilitating the report of crimes, and maintaining the sustainability of national justice and health systems.

Further protection of victims with specific needs

The Rapporteurs support the overall concept of the Directive establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime but consider it imperative to further address support services for victims who are in a particularly high risk of suffering further harm, intimidation or repeated victimization during criminal proceedings.

The Rapporteurs share the Commission's proposal to make a reference to vulnerable victims, but prefer the wording of 'victims with specific needs'. The terminology used in the Commission's proposal, defining this category of victims as "vulnerable victims" could be seen as an unintended discriminatory naming. Many victims, including victims of gender-based violence do not like to be associated with vulnerability. However, a victim of gender-based violence can have specific needs without being seen as vulnerable. The Commission's proposal correctly mentions children and persons with disabilities as vulnerable victims because of their personal characteristics. It seems indeed logical to define a person affected by disability, a woman having suffered from a sexual assault or a child as a vulnerable victim, but the victims' personal characteristics before having suffered a crime should not be considered as the sole criteria in defining them. The Rapporteurs therefore prefer to refer to this group as "victims with specific needs" and provide for specific protection measures for such victims.

These measures include but are not limited to provision of shelter, medical support, forensic medical evidence, psychological counselling, and legal counselling. Such support services should be sufficiently spread throughout the country and accessible for all victims.

In order to further assess circumstances and victims' characteristics, the Rapporteurs also introduce additional definitions, namely "gender-based violence" and "violence in close relationship". Gender-based violence refers to violence that is directed against a person because of his or her gender. Violence in close relationship includes violence perpetrated by intimate partners or ex partners or other family members and leads to discrimination and violations of the fundamental freedoms of the victims.

When dealing with victims with specific needs on the basis of the nature of the crime we should also reach a helping hand to other types of victims, not solely victims of human trafficking or victims of sexual violence (as shown in the Commission's text).

Victims of terrorism, victims of organised crime, victims of violence in close relationships and victims of gender based violence should also be included as victims of specific needs. As the nature of the crime occurs in different forms, the need for the victim differs as well. The mentioning of specific needs is as essential as its sensitivity. For example victims of terrorism: the main difference with other victims lies in the context in which terrorist victimisation occurs, and its audience. Victims of terrorism, by definition are attacked as representative of a larger group. Acknowledgment of their victimisation entails recognising this fact. Support groups for victims of terrorism encompasses the needs of victims, amongst their legal support, into four necessities: the right to justice, dignity, truth and memory, by which the later stands for rebuking terrorism and its victimization and to preserve that memory for generations to come.

Individual assessment and training

Apart from conventional victim support, in addition to an initial focus on those victims who have suffered a particularly gruesome experience is not to be underestimated: severe exposure and destruction or traumatic loss; experience of traumatic events or a current or prior history of mental health of mental health treatment and a lack of social support, not having close family and friends support are very important to be taken in account. Efforts should be made to ascertain those members of social community who are alone, as they may be the ones for whom social support or follow-up help may be particularly important.

The Rapporteurs therefore consider the individual assessment an important step from the moment harm takes place. It will identify the needs of the victim before, during and after the criminal proceedings. In criminal proceedings often the authorities are unaware of the needs of the victim, making it difficult for the victim to cope with the cooperation. Police, prosecutors and other personnel should be trained to know how to approach the victim, depending on the type of crime. Specifically, in order to better provide to the needs of victims of gender-based violence and violence in close relationships the Rapporteurs demand that justice professionals, police officers and members of the victim support services should receive training which would gender-sensitise them and allow for quick identification of and support for the victims' needs. In line with the spirit of co-operation, the Rapporteurs deem it relevant that such training is carried out in close consultation with non-governmental organizations and service providers for victims of gender-based violence, and is institutionalised and standardised across Member States.

Understanding the gender dynamics of victims' rights

Gender-based violence is a form of violence that affects women disproportionately and it may be interrelated but it is not limited to cases of violence in close relationship. Research shows that in Europe one-fifth to one-quarter of all women have experienced physical violence at least once during their adult lives and more than one-tenth have suffered sexual violence involving the use of force. In this context, the Rapporteurs believe that is crucial to criminalise all forms of gender-based violence and provide victims thereof with special prevention, protection and remedies measures.

To this end, the Rapporteurs set a clear obligation that support for victims with specific needs recognises gender dynamics and operates within a gender equality and human rights framework. The Rapporteurs trust that such an approach is also vital for avoiding secondary victimisation of victims of gender-based violence.

The intention of the Rapporteurs is to ensure that a comprehensive definition of "victim" was adopted on European level and that the particular situation of victims with specific needs is taken into account when designing appropriate support services or training practitioners who are in immediate contact with victims. To this end, the Directive includes a number of rights which victims should be assured of and thus fills a significant gap in human rights protection for victims of crime. The Rapporteurs also frame the gender-based violence as a manifestation of gender inequality and violation of human rights and thus significantly further recognition of violence against women as a form of discrimination which has to be recognised and combated.

A greater co-operation and co-ordination to protect victims

Member States are also advised to develop a general multi-agency approach that ensures effective co-ordination among those authorities providing support to victims. In this respect, the Directive envisions the creation of formal or informal structures which would allow professionals from the judiciary, law enforcement agencies and NGOs to co-operate in a standardised manner. The Rapporteurs believe that co-ordinated response to all victims would minimise the negative impact of the crime, the risks of secondary and repeated victimisation and stigmatization and the burden on the victim due to repeated interactions between the victim and criminal justice agencies.

Ensuring protection of victim's privacy

The Rapporteurs set a clear obligation that the private and family life of victims is protected throughout any criminal proceedings and after such proceedings. Safeguarding the privacy of the victim, whatever the nature of the harm, should by all means be guaranteed as it is part of the victim's needs to cope with the legal process specifically, and the psychological recovery generally. For example the media can often inflict a further victimization upon crime victims or survivors by exacerbating victims' feelings of violation, disorientation, and loss of control. Therefore, the Rapporteurs also require the media to pursue "self-regulatory measures" in order to protect victims' personal integrity from intrusive media attention.

European network and statistics

Victim needs to be aware that their rights will be standardised throughout the whole of the EU. Information and awareness raising campaigns, research and education programmes and cooperation with civil society agencies should be established by means of well orchestrated campaigns between the EU Member States. Furthermore, collecting and exchange of data on all types of victims is required to ultimately tackle crime. For that reason the Rapporteurs call for the establishment through already existing European associations dealing with victims' needs, of a European Network for observation and aid to victims to set up a database of statistics includes the number, age, gender and nationality of the victim. Such a Network could provide the premises for future Directives to further enhance the development of an area of Freedom, Security and Justice.

Acknowledgement

The Rapporteurs are grateful for the explanations provided by the Commission through DG JUSTICE, as well as for the fruitful exchange of views with the shadow Rapporteurs, and the Danish Presidency of the EU. The Rapporteurs would also like to express their gratitude for the positions and expertise put forward by organisations, associations and NGO's on rights, support and protection of victims of crime.

for the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and the Committee on Women's Rights

on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime (COM(2011)0275 – C7-0127/2011 – 2011/0129(COD))

Rapporteur: Antonio López-Istúriz White

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

In a classic Court of Justice case, a British citizen, Ian Cowan suffered a violent assault at the exit of a metro station during a brief stay in Paris. His assailants could not be identified. He therefore sought compensation from the French authorities for injury resulting from that assault.

As it turned out, France made the award of State compensation for harm caused in France to the victim of an assault resulting in physical injury subject to the condition that the victim hold a residence permit or be a national of a country which has entered into a reciprocal arrangement with France. Mr Cowan did not fit within any of these categories and was therefore denied compensation. The Court, on a reference from the national compensation body, held that such a limitation was contrary to the prohibition of discrimination by reason of nationality enshrined in the Treaty.

This case shows to what extent lacunae or even discriminatory measures in the protection of victims in the internal market and now in the area of freedom, security and justice can hamper the fundamental rights of Union citizens, particularly those who choose to exercise their right to free movement. As the Court of Justice rightly held, the protection of victims is "a corollary of that freedom of movement"<sup>1</sup>. The Union ensures the free movement of persons, it must equally ensure proper standards and rules when things go wrong.

The committee therefore strongly welcomes the Commission's proposal for a directive establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, in particular given the shortcomings of previously adopted EU instruments, be it in terms of content or in implementation<sup>1</sup>. It considers it essential and long overdue that these rights be strengthened and promoted to ensure a proper balance with ongoing EU initiatives concerning suspected and accused persons' rights. Generally speaking, criminal justice systems focus on the offender and the public, sometimes to the detriment of the victim and the traumatic effects of the crime. Victims should not feel excluded from such proceedings.

The committee would like to see certain aspects of the proposal strengthened and made more effective, whilst remaining cost-effective and sustainable financially.

The committee supports the Commission's approach of setting out minimum standards, thereby enabling Member States to go further in protecting victims if they wish. This approach should establish a basic level of support for victims in those Member States which do not have long established victim support organisations.

In certain cases, following large-scale crimes, victims can be especially traumatised. This is generally the case for victims of terrorist crimes, but can also apply to victims of organised crime. This is because the criminal acts in question, owing to their scale but also to the way in which they are carried out, destroy the everyday lives of victims for good, leading them to lose their sense of normality. The confidence of, for example, a victim of a terrorist bomb and a victim of human trafficking can be irreparably damaged in similar ways. Such victims need to rebuild their lives. This is why your rapporteur believes that victims of such crimes should be treated as vulnerable victims.

Even though a series of minimum rights is a crucial basis, what victims need above all is individual and respectful attention by the relevant justice system.

Finally, the committee considers that criminal justice systems in the Member States should be more geared towards to protection of victims, and not solely focused on the defendant. This change of culture cannot be achieved solely by legislation but will require sustained training and educational efforts, practical guidance and exchange of best practice. The Union is in a privileged position to lead on such questions as better awareness of victims' rights, better enforcement of these rights and proper training especially for judicial staff and legal practitioners.

AMENDMENTS

The Committee on Legal Affairs calls on the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and the Committee on Women's Rights, as the committees responsible, to incorporate the following amendments in their report:

1. Member States shall ensure that victims and their family members, in accordance with their needs, have access to free of charge, confidential victim support services before, during, and for an appropriate amount of time after conclusion of any criminal proceedings.

Justification

It is necessary to specify that there should be a consistent, guaranteed level of support across Member States and that support should not be limited to the aftermath of the crime as criminal proceedings can be protracted, complex and traumatic, particularly for victims of violent and/or sexual crime.

Amendment 17

Proposal for a directive

Article 7 – paragraph 4 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

4a. Member States shall respect the victim's choice not to avail himself or herself of support from the State.

Amendment 18

Proposal for a directive

Article 7 – paragraph 4 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

4a. Member States shall allow governmental or non-governmental organisations with a legitimate interest which are registered and monitored under national law to intervene in criminal proceedings in support of, or on behalf of, the victim or victims.

Amendment 19

Proposal for a directive

Article 8

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Member States shall ensure that victims receive written acknowledgement of any complaint made by them to an appropriate authority of the Member State.

Member States shall ensure that victims receive written acknowledgement in a language they understand of any complaint made by them to an appropriate authority of the Member State.

Justification

In line with the rights afforded to individuals accused of committing crimes abroad.

Amendment 20

Proposal for a directive Article 9

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall ensure that victims may be heard during criminal proceedings and may supply evidence.

Amendment

Member States shall ensure that victims may take part in criminal proceedings and that they have the right to be heard during criminal proceedings and to supply evidence.

Amendment 21

Proposal for a directive Article 11 – paragraph 1 – point c

Text proposed by the Commission

(c) the suspected or accused person or offender must have accepted responsibility for their act;

Amendment

(c) the suspected or accused person or offender must have accepted responsibility for their act and must offer an explanation to the victim;

Amendment 22

Proposal for a directive Article 11 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

2. Member States shall facilitate the referral of cases to mediation or other restorative justice services, including through the establishment of protocols on the conditions for referral.

Amendment

2. Member States shall facilitate the referral of cases to mediation or other restorative justice services, including through the establishment of procedures on the conditions for referral.

Amendment 23

Proposal for a directive Article 11 – paragraph 2 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

2a. Member States shall ensure that mediation or other restorative justice services, where provided by non-governmental organisations, are registered and subject to regular monitoring under national law.

Amendment 24

Proposal for a directive Article 14

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Member States shall ensure that recoverable property belonging to victims which is seized in the course of criminal proceedings is returned to them without delay, unless required for the purpose of criminal proceedings.

Member States shall ensure that property belonging to victims which is seized in the course of criminal proceedings is returned to them without delay, unless required for the purpose of criminal proceedings.

Amendment 25

Proposal for a directive Article 15 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

2. Member States shall take measures to encourage offenders to provide adequate compensation to victims.

2. Member States shall take measures to encourage offenders to provide adequate compensation to victims and shall assist victims in the timely enforcement of compensation orders.

Justification

This paragraph should be strengthened by stressing that Member States should be responsible for ensuring that compensation orders are quickly executed.

Amendment 26

Proposal for a directive Article 16 – paragraph 3 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

3a. Member States shall ensure that simple, common procedures are in place to enable victims of crime resident in another Member State to apply for compensation easily, and that cross-border compensation orders are executed without undue delay.

Justification

Victims of crime abroad should not be put off from claiming the compensation that they are entitled to by complex procedures. Member States should ensure that there is a single, simple procedure for non-national claims for compensation, and that cross-border compensation orders are executed in a timely fashion.

Amendment 27

Proposal for a directive Article 18 – paragraph 1 – introductory part

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall ensure that all agencies in contact with victims adopt clear standards by which they may only disclose to a third party information received from or relating to a victim, on the condition that the victim has consented to such disclosure, or that there is a legal requirement or authorisation to do so.

Amendment 39

Proposal for a directive Article 24 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. Member States shall ensure that police, prosecutors and court staff receive both general and specialist training to a level appropriate to their contact with victims to sensitise them to the needs of victims and to deal with them in an impartial, respectful and professional manner.

Amendment

1. Member States shall ensure that police, prosecutors and court staff always receive both general and specialist training to a level commensurate with their contact with victims to sensitise them to the needs of victims and to deal with them in an impartial, respectful and professional manner.

Amendment 40

Proposal for a directive Article 24 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

2. Member States shall ensure that members of the judiciary have access to both general and specialist training to sensitise them to the needs of victims and to deal with them in an impartial, respectful and professional manner.

Amendment

2. Without prejudice to judicial independence and differences in the organisation of the judiciary across the Union, Member States shall ensure that members of the judiciary have access to both general and specialist training to make them aware of the needs of victims and of the need to deal with such victims in an impartial, respectful and professional manner, and that they are encouraged to take part in such training, including further training, where appropriate.

Amendment 41

Proposal for a directive Article 24 – paragraph 2 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

2a. Member States shall always ensure that lawyers have access to both general and specialist training to sensitise them to

Text proposed by the Commission

3. Member States shall take measures to ensure that those providing victim support and restorative justice services receive adequate training to a level appropriate to their contact with victims and observe professional standards to ensure such services are provided in an impartial, respectful and professional manner.

Amendment

3. Member States shall always take measures to ensure that those providing victim support and restorative justice services receive adequate training to a level commensurate with their contact with victims and observe professional standards to ensure such services are provided in an impartial, respectful and professional manner.

Amendment 43

Proposal for a directive Article 25 – paragraph 2 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

2b. Member States shall ensure that their embassies and consulates have well-established liaison mechanisms in place with the victims' service providers and agencies in the Member States in which they are located in order to ensure the quick referral of victims.

Justification

This suggestion has been made by several constituents in cases where they, or relatives, have become victims of crime abroad. It is an omission that should be addressed in legislation.

Amendment 44

Proposal for a directive Article 25 – paragraph 2 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

2c. Member States shall ensure that their national law on the repatriation of mortal remains follows a common procedure and time frame which take into account both the wishes of the family and their religious and cultural traditions.

Justification

This is a recurrent and persistent problem for families of victims of crime.

Amendment 45

Proposal for a directive Article 27 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 27a
