EU Justice and Home affairs legislation under the 2009-14 term of the European Parliament

The latest term of the European Parliament has just come to an end. For most of this term, the Treaty of Lisbon was in force, meaning that the 'ordinary legislative procedure' applied to the adoption of the vast majority of Justice and Home Affairs legislation.

This analysis presents a brief summary of the JHA legislation adopted during this parliamentary term. It can be seen that under the most recent legislature, the EU adopted laws concerning:

- the second phase of the Common European Asylum System;
- amendments to the rules on visa requirements, internal border checks, internal border controls, and Frontex;
- various aspects of legal migration, but nothing significant on irregular migration;
- revised or new rules concerning aspects of civil jurisdiction, conflict of laws and enforcement of judgments;
- rules for the first time on criminal suspects' rights;
- revised rules on some areas of substantive criminal law;
- revised rules on investigation orders (previously known as mutual assistance), but not on any other aspects of mutual recognition.
- revised rules on victims' rights and confiscation of criminal assets, and new rules on protection orders.

Proposed EU legislation does not lapse when the European Parliament's term ends. This leaves two categories of measures which have not been adopted yet.

First of all, some legislation was agreed in principle, but has not yet been formally adopted. These measures will likely all be formally adopted in the spring by the Council.

Secondly, some legislation was not agreed at all during the EP's term, either because it was proposed very late in the term (for instance, new visa rules and further measures on criminal suspects), or because either the EP and/or the Council could not agree its position. In one case (EU fraud), both institutions agreed their position, but the EP agreed it too late to negotiate.

For these measures, where the Council has not yet agreed its position, negotiations will continue under the current Greek Presidency to agree it (negotiations for Council positions are currently furthest advanced as regards the Europol Regulation and the Directive on child criminal suspects). Where both the EP and the Council have agreed their positions, negotiations with the EP will get underway when the EP resumes its normal business in September.

The following lists present in turn (a) legislation formally adopted during the 2009-14 term; (b) legislation agreed in principle, which will be adopted in spring; and (c) legislation which was not agreed.
