Subject:	Proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and the Council on the conditions of entry and residence of third-country nationals for the purposes of highly skilled employment - Confirmation of the final compromise text with a view to agreement

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 7 June 2016, the Commission adopted a proposal for a Directive on the conditions of entry and residence of third-country nationals for the purposes of highly skilled employment¹. This proposal, which replaces the existing EU Blue Card Directive (2009/50/EC), aims to improve the EU's ability to attract and retain highly skilled third-country nationals, as well as to enhance their mobility and circulation between jobs in different Member States.
2. The Slovak Presidency started the examination of the 2016 proposal in the Council preparatory bodies soon after its presentation. The proposal was considerably modified by the Council under the Slovak and Maltese Presidencies. The Estonian Presidency was eventually granted a mandate to begin interinstitutional negotiations on 26 July 2017².

3. The LIBE Committee of the European Parliament adopted a mandate to enter into interinstitutional negotiations on 15 June 2017. The Report of the LIBE Committee was later endorsed by the Plenary of the European Parliament on 28 June 2017.
4. Interinstitutional negotiations began soon thereafter, on 12 September 2017, under the Estonian Presidency. Between September and December 2017, four trilogues and several technical meetings took place, which led to a number of provisions being agreed.
5. Since the positions of the two institutions differed considerably on several key issues, the Estonian Presidency presented a compromise package to COREPER on 20 December 2017, but discussions did not result in a clear outcome as Member States were divided on a variety of questions.
6. Under the Bulgarian Presidency, efforts to agree to a compromise package continued but were ultimately unsuccessful. Due to the European Parliaments' strong views in favour of harmonisation, interinstitutional negotiations were paused at the beginning of 2018.
7. In January 2019, the Romanian Presidency tried to make progress on the file and presented JHA Counsellors with a possible compromise package. However, the European Parliament concluded that it did not see the package as a basis for resuming negotiations.
8. No progress on the file was possible during the Finnish and Croatian Presidencies due to ongoing institution change following the 2019 elections to the European Parliament.

9. On 31 January 2020, Claude Moraes (S&D, UK) was replaced by Javier Moreno Sánchez (ES, S&D) as rapporteur.
10. In September 2020, the Commission presented its new Pact on Migration and Asylum, in which it signalled some flexibility on the continued existence of parallel national schemes, acknowledging Member States' specific labour market needs. As a result, the German Presidency decided to relaunch interinstitutional negotiations and a political trilogue took place on 25 November 2020. Several technical meetings were held in November and December 2020 and various compromise proposals were presented to JHA Counsellors by the Presidency. On 10 December 2020, another political trilogue was held at which a number of issues were agreed.
11. Work continued under the Portuguese Presidency and a political trilogue took place on 11 February 2021 at which further progress was achieved. Numerous technical meetings were held between January and May 2021.
12. In order to resolve remaining difficulties on various key issues, the Presidency presented a comprehensive compromise package on all outstanding issues to JHA Counsellors in April 2021. This compromise package was widely supported by delegations and was further refined in April and May 2021.
13. At the beginning of May 2021, negotiations continued at technical level on the basis of this compromise package and the co-legislators were able to agree on most outstanding issues.
14. The Presidency has kept Member States constantly updated on developments in the negotiations, convening a number of meetings of the JHA Counsellors for this purpose, as well as organising numerous consultations on compromise proposals tabled during the negotiations.

15. At the last trilogue, on 17 May 2021, the co-legislators found an agreement on all remaining issues.
16. Further revision of the text will be done in due time by the legal/linguistic experts.
17. Provided that COREPER indicates that it can agree to the text of the provisional compromise, the LIBE Committee is expected to vote to confirm the political agreement at its meeting of 3 June 2021.

II. ANALYSIS OF THE POLITICAL AGREEMENT

18. The compromise package resulting from the trilogues is set out below for delegations' consideration.
19. Regarding the issue of harmonisation, the Council's initial negotiation mandate included a possibility for Member States to keep parallel national schemes (in addition to the EU Blue Card) for the admission of highly qualified third-country nationals. This issue proved to be very controversial during the first stage of interinstitutional negotiations in 2017, the European Parliament and the Commission insisting on full harmonisation and the abolition of national schemes. Following the presentation of its new Pact on Migration and Asylum, the Commission signalled that it could potentially agree to the continued existence of parallel national schemes, acknowledging Member States' specific labour market needs. By way of a compromise, the co-legislators eventually agreed to include a set of provisions guaranteeing a level playing field between the EU Blue Card and national schemes for highly qualified workers from third countries. Essentially, these provisions ensure that EU Blue Card holders do not enjoy less favourable treatment than third country nationals employed under a national scheme in a number of areas. These provisions are notably included in Articles 5, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17 and 25, as well as in recital 6.

20. The mandatory recognition of professional skills in addition to educational qualifications was difficult to resolve and led to the abovementioned pause in interinstitutional negotiations in 2018. The Parliament initially insisted on the mandatory recognition of such skills with a requirement of only three years of professional experience. The Council's negotiating mandate, on the other hand, included an optional recognition of professional skills with a requirement of five years professional experience. By way of a compromise, the Presidency suggested to follow a sectoral approach and to initially include only highly skilled workers from the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) sector, with a requirement of three years professional experience. The exact professions that benefit from a mandatory recognition of skills are identified on the basis of their ISCO classification in an Annex to the directive. By way of a compromise, a review clause was agreed according to which the Commission will assess every two years whether this list should be revised. If a revision is deemed necessary, the ordinary legislative procedure must be followed. It should be noted that the required length of professional experience is specific to each profession listed in the Annex (e.g. three years for highly skilled ICT professionals). As in the current Blue Card Directive, Member States retain the option of granting a Blue Card to highly skilled workers from other sectors than those listed in the Annex, but this is not mandatory. These changes are reflected in Articles 2, 9 and 26, as well as in recitals 10, 11, 19 and 22.

21. The issue of intra-EU mobility also proved difficult to resolve due to the Parliament's insistence that long-term intra-EU mobility should be substantially facilitated with little or no control by the second Member State. This was challenged by the Council, notably on the basis that Member States need to retain a sufficient level of control over their labour market policies. By way of a compromise, the co-legislators eventually agreed to a simplified application procedure with shortened procedural deadlines. The Council resisted the Parliament's request for a mere notification procedure without any verification of the Blue Card holder's professional qualifications by the second Member State. The final compromise includes a shortened 30-day procedural deadline for examining the mobility application (which may be extended by an additional 30 days in cases justified by the complexity of the application). Moreover, at the latest 30 days after submitting the complete application, the applicant is allowed to start working in the second Member State. For unregulated professions, the second Member State may require Blue Card holders to present documents attesting their higher professional qualifications only where the Blue Card holder has worked for less than two years in the first Member State. For regulated professions, Blue Card holders must provide evidence of the fulfilment of the conditions set out under national law for the exercise of the relevant profession regardless of how long they have been Blue Card holders. In all cases, mobile Blue Card holders must also present a valid work contract. These compromise solutions are notably reflected in Articles 20, 21, and 23, as well as in recitals 15, 28, 33, 53 and 54. In addition, Article 22 contains specific provisions on the residence of family members of the Blue Card holder in the second Member State.

22. The issue of unemployment proved to be one of the toughest issues in the negotiations. The European Parliament's position included a very wide-ranging protection of Blue Card holders in case of unemployment, according to which Member States could only withdraw a Blue Card after a period of unemployment of minimum six months. During the negotiations, the Council, which favoured a period of three months, made it clear that the Parliament's approach would lead to a disproportionate burden on the social security systems of Member States. The Council also underlined that the length of authorised unemployment should be linked to the period of time during which the Blue Card holder has contributed to the social security system. The agreed compromise strikes a balance between these divergent views and makes a distinction between third country nationals that have held a Blue Card for less than two years and those that have held a Blue Card for two years or more. The former may only cumulate a period of three months of unemployment before their Blue Card may be withdrawn, whereas the latter may cumulate six months of unemployment. This compromise is reflected in Articles 8 and 15.

23. With regard to long-term residence, the Parliament's initial position included a right for Blue Card holders to acquire long-term residence status after already three years, by way of derogation from the five-year period provided for in the Long-Term Residents Directive. While the Council agreed that Blue Card holders should benefit from a facilitated access to long-term residence status compared to other third-country nationals in order to enhance the attractiveness of the EU Blue Card, its negotiating mandate only included the option (and not the obligation) for Member States to grant Blue Card holders such a status after already three years. During the course of the negotiations, it appeared that such an option would entail serious legal and practical difficulties and it was agreed to go back to the general five-year rule contained in the Long-Term Residents Directive. By way of a compromise, in order to facilitate the access to long-term residence, it was agreed that Blue Card holders exercising mobility should be able to cumulate periods of residences accrued under different residence schemes in other Member States. In particular, periods of residence as holders of a national residence permits for highly qualified employment, as students and researchers or as beneficiaries for international protection may be cumulated in order to fulfil the requirement concerning the duration of residence. Finally, the co-legislators agreed to allow longer periods of absence from the EU than those specified in the Long-Term Residents Directive for Blue Card holders. These compromise solutions are reflected in Articles 18 and 19, as well as in recitals 48 and 49.

24. With respect to the applicable salary threshold, the Council mandate included a range of between 1.1 and 1.7 times the average gross annual salary in the concerned Member State. This relatively wide range reflected the fact that some Member States were in favour of a high salary threshold, as a measure to attract truly highly qualified workers, whereas others expressed their preference for a lower threshold, in order to increase the inclusiveness of the EU Blue Card. The Parliament, on the other hand, favoured a narrower range between 1.0 and 1.4 times the average gross annual salary. The final compromise remains close to the Council mandate and includes a range between 1.0 and 1.6 times the average gross annual salary. By way of a compromise, the co-legislators agreed that Member States must choose the applicable salary threshold after consultation with social partners within this lower and upper limit. This consultation must occur "according to national practices" and does not bind the concerned Member State. With regard to the possible derogations to the applicable salary threshold, the co-legislators ultimately agreed not to include the derogation proposed by the Council for paragraph 2a of Article 5 (average annual salary lower than half of the average and EU level, combined with significant regional differences). The wide range of 1.0 to 1.6 times the average gross annual salary was already considered sufficiently wide to address such situations. Finally, the other applicable derogations contained in the Commission's proposal (for professions with shortages and young graduates) were retained, as proposed in the Council mandate. The final compromise reflected in paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 of Article 5, as well as in recital 32, strikes a balance between further harmonising the admission conditions and ensuring that Member States retain a sufficient level of flexibility to take into account the specificities of their labour markets.

25. Regarding the issue of labour market access, the main concern of Member States related to the need to progressively integrate Blue Card holders into the labour market, with sufficient safeguards to ensure that persons admitted as highly-qualified workers actually end up in corresponding occupations and that the EU Blue Card scheme is not used for abusive purposes. In that regard, the negotiations mainly revolved around the question of labour market tests in case of (1) change of employer (within the same Member State) ; and (2) mobility towards a second Member State. In both cases, the fundamental principle according to which Member States may conduct a labour market test before granting a Blue Card or allowing a Blue Card holder to change employer or exercise mobility was retained, as proposed in the Council mandate. By way of a compromise, to avoid tying a person to an employer for a disproportionate period of time, the co-legislators agreed to limit the possibility of conducting labour market tests to the first 12 months of employment. With regard to mobility towards a second Member State, it was agreed that labour market tests should only be applied if this possibility exists for first-time Blue Card applicants in the concerned Member State. By way of a compromise, the co-legislators also agreed not to apply labour market tests to family members of Blue Card holders. Another issue concerned the access to self-employed activities (subsidiary to a person's main activity as a Blue Card holder). In that regard, the final compromise remains close to the Council mandate: Member States may allow Blue Card holders to engage in such activities and are entitled to limit the scope of the self-employed activity. The conditions for exercising such activities must however be no less favourable than those for exercising self-employed activities under national schemes for highly qualified employment. These compromise solutions are reflected in Articles 7, 15, 17 and 21, as well as in recitals 36, 40 and 41.

26. Finally, on the issue of the scope of the directive, interinstitutional negotiations mainly focused on the issue of applicants and beneficiaries of international protection. Regarding applicants, the Council managed to keep such third-country nationals outside the scope of the directive. Conversely, as already foreseen in the Council mandate, beneficiaries of international protection were included in the scope. By way of a compromise, the co-legislators agreed that beneficiaries should also be allowed to apply for a Blue Card in the Member State that granted them protection, without any waiting period. This solution was considered necessary to increase the attractiveness of the EU Blue Card and avoid any unjustified discrimination between beneficiaries of international protection and other holders of residence permits in the same Member State. The co-legislators agreed that the advantages of such a solution outweigh the potential administrative burden caused by the double status certain Blue Card holders will therefore have. This compromise is reflected in Article 3 and recital 13.
27. At the very end of the technical negotiations, the European Parliament linked the acceptance of the Presidency's compromise package to some incremental changes being made to the provisions regarding (1) the extension of the list of highly skilled workers included in the Annex ; (2) the documents to be presented in case of intra-EU mobility; and (3) the protection of Blue Card holders against unemployment. Eventually, the European Parliament accepted to drop all its requests.

III. CONCLUSION

28. In light of the above, COREPER is invited to:

- approve the text set out in the Annex to this note³, and
- agree that the Chair of Coreper will send a letter to the Chair of the LIBE Committee accordingly, confirming that should the European Parliament, in accordance with Article 294(3) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, adopt its position at first reading in the form of the text as contained in the Annex to this letter, after its revision by the lawyer-linguists in accordance with the usual procedure, the Council would, in accordance with Article 294(4) of that Treaty, approve the European Parliament's position and adopt the act.

³ Changes compared to the Commission proposal are marked in bold/italics for additions and ~~strikethrough~~ for deletions.

DIRECTIVE (EU) .../...
OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL of

on the conditions of entry and residence of third-country nationals for the purposes of highly qualified employment

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular points (a) and (b) of Article 79(2) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee **¶,

Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions **¶,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) The Commission █'s Communication of 3 March 2010 entitled 'Europe 2020: A strategy for smart, sustainable and inclusive growth'³ sets the objective of the Union becoming an economy based on knowledge and innovation, reducing the administrative burden on companies and better matching labour supply with demand and identifies the need for a comprehensive labour migration policy and for better integration of migrants. Measures to facilitate the admission of third-country national highly qualified workers have to be seen in that broader context.
- (2) The conclusions of the European Council of 26 and 27 June 2014 state that in order to remain an attractive destination for talents and skills, Europe must compete in the global race for talent. Strategies to maximise the opportunities of legal migration should therefore be developed, including the streamlining of existing rules.
- (3) The European Agenda on Migration adopted on 13 May 2015 calls for an attractive EU █ wide scheme for highly qualified third-country nationals, and specifies that a review of Council Directive 2009/50/EC █ is needed to make it more effective in attracting talents to the Union and thereby address both the demographic challenges faced by the Union and labour and skills shortages in key sectors of the Union economy. This call is reiterated in the New Pact on Migration and Asylum adopted on 23 September 2020, stating that the reform of the EU Blue Card must bring real EU added value in attracting skills through an effective and flexible EU-wide instrument.
- (4) The European Parliament, in its resolution of 12 April 2016 called for an ambitious and targeted review of the Directive, including on the scope.

- (5) It is necessary to respond to the challenges identified in the implementation report on Directive 2009/50/EC. The Union should aim at establishing a more attractive and effective EU-wide scheme for highly qualified workers. The Union approach on attracting highly qualified workers should be further harmonised and the EU Blue Card should be made the primary tool in that regard with faster procedures, more flexible and inclusive admission criteria, and more extensive rights including more facilitated intra-EU mobility. As this would entail substantial changes to Directive 2009/50/EC, that Directive should therefore be repealed and replaced by a new Directive.
- (6) A clear and transparent EU-wide admission system to attract and retain highly qualified workers into the Union and promote mobility should be created. This Directive should be applicable regardless of whether the initial purpose of residence of the third-country national is highly qualified employment or if he or she resides first on other grounds and changes status towards this purpose subsequently. It is necessary to take into account the priorities, labour market needs and reception capacities of the Member States. This Directive should be without prejudice to the competence of the Member States | to issue national residence permits other than EU Blue Cards for the purpose of highly qualified employment. Moreover, this Directive should not affect the possibility for an EU Blue Card holder to enjoy additional rights and benefits which may be provided by national law, and which are compatible with this Directive.

- (7) Member States should apply a level playing field between the EU Blue Card and national residence permits for the purpose of highly qualified employment, in terms of procedural and equal treatment rights, procedures and access to information. In particular, Member States should ensure that EU Blue Card holders and their family members do not enjoy a lower level of procedural safeguards and rights than holders of national residence permits. They should also ensure that applicants for an EU Blue Card are not in a less favourable position than applicants for national residence permits with regard to recognition procedures for employers, and that they are not required to pay a higher level of fees for the handling of their application. Finally, Member States should ensure that the EU Blue Card benefits of the same level of information, promotion and advertisement activities than the national residence permits, for example through information on the national websites on legal migration, information campaigns and training programmes for the competent migration authorities.
- (8) In order to reinforce and promote the EU Blue Card scheme and attract highly qualified workers, Member States are encouraged to strengthen advertisement activities and information campaigns concerning the EU Blue Card, including where appropriate towards third countries.

- (9) Member States should give effect to this Directive without discrimination on the basis of sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinions, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation in accordance, in particular, with Council Directive 2000/43/EC and Council Directive 2000/78/EC. For the principle of non-discrimination to be effective, EU Blue Card holders should be able to seek legal redress and lodge complaints as provided for by national law, if they face any kind of discrimination, including in the labour market.
- (10) Having regard to the Eurostat report ‘ICT specialists – statistics on hard-to-fill vacancies in enterprises’ of December 2018 and its conclusions regarding a widespread shortage of highly-skilled workers in the ICT (Information and Communication Technologies) sector in the labour markets of Member States, higher professional skills should be considered equivalent to higher education qualifications for the purpose of applying for an EU Blue Card in two ‘higher’ positions: Information and Communications Technology Services Managers (ISCO-08 classification 133) and Information and Communications Technology Professionals (ISCO-08 classification 25).

Considering that a bachelor degree takes at least three years to complete, the relevant period of required professional experience should be three years. This length of professional experience also appears justified given the fast pace of technological evolution in the ICT sector and the changing needs of employers.

Member States are encouraged to facilitate the assessment and validation of higher professional skills for the purpose of the Blue Card.

It is envisaged that the list of occupations in the Annex could be amended, in particular following an assessment to this end by the Commission on the basis of, among other sources, the information provided by the Member States regarding the needs of their labour markets, for the purpose of recognising professional experience under this Directive in other fields of activity. This assessment is to be provided every two years.

For the occupations not listed in Annex, Member States may accept applications for an EU Blue Card on the basis of evidence of higher professional skills, attested by at least five years of professional experience of a level comparable to higher education qualifications and which is relevant in the profession or sector specified in the work contract or binding job offer.

I

- (11) The concept of highly qualified employment should entail that the person employed not only has a high level of competence, as proven by higher professional qualifications, but also that the work to be carried out is inherently regarded as demanding such competence. While in the modern labour market a direct link between the qualifications and the job is not always and necessarily required, the tasks and duties related to the work contract for highly qualified employment should be so specialised and complex that the required level of competence to perform those duties is usually associated with completion of education programmes and resulting qualifications at ISCED (International Standard Classification of Education) 2011 levels 6, 7 and 8, or, where appropriate, to the broadly equivalent EQF (European Qualifications Framework) levels 6, 7 and 8, according to the national law of the Member State concerned, or, for specific occupations, with comparable higher professional skills.
- (12) This Directive should not affect the right of the Member States to determine the volumes of admission of third-country nationals coming from third countries to their territory in order to seek work in accordance with Article 79(5) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU). On that basis, Member States should be able to either consider an application for an EU Blue Card inadmissible or reject it. ■

- (13) Beneficiaries of international protection as defined in Article 2(a) of Directive 2011/95/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council █ have a wide set of rights, including labour market access in the Member State having granted them protection. In order to █ enhance their labour market opportunities across the Union, those who are highly qualified should be entitled to apply for an EU Blue Card in Member States other than the one which granted them protection. In those Member States, they should be subject to the same rules as any other third █ country national falling within the scope of this Directive, while this Directive should have no impact on their status in the Member State having granted them international protection. Beneficiaries of international protection are also entitled to apply for an EU Blue Card █ in the Member State that granted them international protection. In such a case, for reasons of legal clarity and coherence, the provisions on equal treatment and family reunification of this Directive should not apply to them. Those rights should remain regulated under the asylum acquis and, where applicable, Council Directive 2003/86/EC **█.
- (14) The transfer of responsibility for protection of beneficiaries of international protection is outside the scope of this Directive: the protection status and the rights associated with it should not be transferred to another Member State on the basis of the issuance of an EU Blue Card.

- (15) In order to facilitate the independent intra-EU mobility and business activities of those highly qualified third-country nationals who are beneficiaries of the right to free movement, they should be given access to the EU Blue Card in accordance with the same rules as any other third-country national falling within the scope of this Directive. This entitlement concerns persons enjoying free movement rights based on family ties to a Union citizen in accordance with relevant legislation and it should apply regardless of whether or not the Union citizen of reference has exercised the fundamental right to move and reside freely under Article 21 TFEU and regardless of whether the third-country national concerned was first an EU Blue Card holder or a beneficiary of the right to free movement. Those Blue Card holders should thus be entitled to engage in highly qualified employment, perform business trips and take up residence in different Member States regardless of whether or not the third-country national accompanies the Union citizen of reference. The rights that these third-country nationals acquire as EU Blue Card holders should be without prejudice to rights they may enjoy under Directive 2004/38/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council ¹. For reasons of legal clarity and coherence, in terms of family reunification and equal treatment the rules under Directive 2004/38/EC should prevail. All provisions regarding the beneficiaries of the right to free movement in this Directive should also apply where that right is derived from those third-country nationals who enjoy rights of free movement equivalent to those of Union citizens under agreements either between the Union and its Member States and third countries or between the Union and third countries.

- (16) █ This Directive should not apply to third-country nationals who apply to reside in a Member State as researchers in order to carry out a research project, as they fall within the scope of Directive (EU) 2016/801 of the European Parliament and of the Council █ which introduces a specific procedure for admitting third-country nationals for the purposes of scientific research. However, legally residing third-country nationals admitted under Directive █ EU █ 2016/801 should be entitled to apply for an EU Blue Card under this Directive. Equally, legally residing EU Blue Card holders should be entitled to apply to reside as researchers under Directive 2016/801. In order to ensure such a possibility, Directive 2016/801 should be amended accordingly.
- (17) While this Directive should not apply to third-country nationals who apply to be admitted to the EU as intra-corporate transferees pursuant to Directive 2014/66/EU, intra-corporate transferees legally residing in the EU should be entitled to apply for an EU Blue Card under this Directive for other purposes than those covered under Directive 2014/66/EU █ .

- (18) It is necessary to provide for a flexible demand-driven, clear and balanced admission system based on objective criteria, such as a work contract or a binding job offer of at least 6 months, compliance with the applicable laws, collective agreements or national practices in the relevant occupational branches, a salary threshold adaptable by the Member States to the situation in its labour market and higher professional qualifications or, where appropriate, higher professional skills.
- (19) This Directive is without prejudice to national procedures on the recognition of diplomas. In order to evaluate if the third-country national concerned possesses higher education or equivalent qualifications, reference should be made ■ to ISCED (International Standard Classification of Education) 2011 levels 6, 7 and 8, or, where appropriate, to the broadly equivalent EQF (European Qualifications Framework) levels 6, 7 and 8, according to the national law of the Member State concerned.

Member States are encouraged to facilitate the recognition of documents attesting the relevant higher professional qualifications of the third-country national concerned and, as concerns beneficiaries of international protection who may not have the necessary documents, to establish appropriate assessments and validation arrangements of their prior higher education qualifications or, where relevant, their higher professional skills.

- (20) In order to ensure a sufficient level of harmonisation in the admission conditions throughout the Union, both a lower and upper factor ■ for ■ the salary threshold should be determined. The lower and upper limit for setting the national salary threshold should be determined by multiplying these factors with the average gross annual salary in the Member State concerned. A salary threshold should be chosen, after consultation with the social partners according to national practices, within the range of the lower and upper limit. This salary threshold should set out the minimum salary which a Blue Card holder should earn. Therefore, in order to be admitted under this Directive, applicants should earn a salary which is equal to or greater than the salary threshold chosen by the Member State concerned.
- (21) Member States should be able to provide a lower salary threshold ■ for specific professions where it is considered by the Member State concerned that there is a particular lack of available workforce and where such professions belong to major group 1 or 2 of the ISCO ("International Standard Classification of Occupation") classification. In any event, this salary threshold should not be lower than 1.0 times the average gross annual salary in the Member State concerned.
- (22) In line with the priorities of the New Skills Agenda, in particular to improve skills matching and to tackle skills shortages, Member States are encouraged, where appropriate, after consultation of the social partners, to compile lists of sectors of employment which face shortages of highly qualified workers.

(23) Member States should be able to provide a lower salary threshold ■ to benefit third-country nationals during a certain period after their graduation. This period should be granted each time that the third-country national reaches a level of education relevant for the purposes of this Directive, namely levels 6, 7 or 8 of ISCED 2011 ■ or, where appropriate, EQF levels 6, 7 and 8 ■, according to the national law of the Member State concerned. It should apply whenever the third-country national applies for an initial or renewed EU Blue Card within three years from the date of obtaining the qualifications and in addition, when that third-country national applies for a ■ renewal of the EU Blue Card and a period of 24 months has not elapsed since the issuance of the initial EU Blue Card ■. After these grace periods – which may run in parallel – have elapsed the young professionals can be reasonably expected to have gained sufficient professional experience in order to fulfil the regular salary threshold. In any event, this lower salary threshold should not be lower than 1.0 times the average gross annual salary in the Member State concerned.

- (24) The conditions of entry and residence of third-country nationals for the purposes of highly qualified employment, including the eligibility criteria related to a salary threshold should be defined. The salary threshold set by the Member State should not aim to determine salaries and therefore should not derogate from the rules or practices at Member State level or from collective agreements, and should not be used to constitute any harmonisation in this field. The salary paid to the Blue Card holder should not be lower than the applicable salary threshold but it may be higher, as determined between the employer and the third-country national, in line with market conditions, labour laws, collective agreements and practices in the Member State concerned. This Directive should fully respect the competences of Member States, particularly on employment, labour and social matters.
- (25) Member States should be able to require the third-country national to provide for his or her address at the time of application. In case the third-country national does not yet know his or her future address, Member States should accept a temporary address, which could be the address of the employer.

(26) The period of validity for the EU Blue Card should be at least 24 months. In cases where the duration of the work contract is shorter, the EU Blue Card should be issued at least for the duration of the work contract plus three months, for a maximum of 24 months. If the third-country national holds a travel document whose period of validity is shorter than 24 months or the duration of the work contract, the EU Blue Card should be issued at least for the period of validity of the travel document. Third-country nationals should be allowed to renew their travel document while holding an EU Blue Card.

(27) Member States should reject applications for an EU Blue Card and be allowed to withdraw or refuse to renew an EU Blue Card if there is a threat to public policy, public security or public health. A threat to public health is to be understood in line with Regulation (EU) 2016/399. Any rejection on grounds of public policy or public security should be based on the individual behaviour of the person concerned, in accordance with the principle of proportionality. Illness or disability suffered after the third-country national was admitted to the territory of the first Member State should not constitute the sole ground for withdrawing or refusing to renew an EU Blue Card or for not issuing an EU Blue Card in a second Member State.

Moreover, Member States should have the possibility not to withdraw or not to refuse to renew an EU Blue Card, where the obligation to present a valid work contract or the applicable salary threshold are temporarily not met due to illness, disability or parental leave.

- (28) Member States should be allowed to withdraw or refuse to renew an EU Blue Card where the EU Blue Card holder has ■ failed to comply with the conditions for mobility under this Directive, including in the case of abusive use of mobility rights ■, for example by not respecting the period allowed for carrying out a business activity or by not submitting an application for long-term mobility within the requested time frame in second Member States, or by applying for an EU Blue Card in a second Member State and beginning employment sooner than allowed while it is clear that the conditions will not be fulfilled and the application will be refused.
- (29) Any decision to reject an application for an EU Blue Card or to withdraw or refuse to renew an EU Blue Card should take into consideration the specific circumstances of the case and be proportionate. In particular, where the ground for rejection, withdrawal or refusal to renew is related to the conduct of the employer, ■ minor misconduct of the employer should not in any case constitute the sole ground for rejecting an application or withdrawing or refusing to renew the permit.
- (30) Any decision rejecting an application for an EU Blue Card should not affect the right of a third-country national to submit another application. The submission of such a new application should not authorise the person concerned to remain in the territory of the Member State concerned, except when provided by national law.

- (31) Once all the conditions for admission are fulfilled, Member States should issue an EU Blue Card within specified time limits. If a Member State issues residence permits only on its territory and all the conditions of this Directive relating to admission are fulfilled, the Member State should grant the third-country national concerned the requisite visa. It should be ensured that the competent authorities effectively cooperate for that purpose. In the event that the Member State does not issue visas, it should grant the third-country national concerned an equivalent permit allowing entry.
- (32) The rules on processing times for EU Blue Card applications should guarantee the swift issuance of permits in all cases. The processing time for examining the application for an EU Blue Card should not include the time required for the recognition of professional qualifications, where applicable, or the time required for issuing a visa, if required. In case the validity of the EU Blue Card expires during the procedure for renewal, the third-country national should be entitled, until the decision on the application is taken by the competent authorities, to stay, work and enjoy the rights provided for under this Directive in the territory of the Member State which issued the EU Blue Card, but not the right to mobility to a second Member State.

- (33) Where a Member State has determined that an application for an EU Blue Card or for intra-EU mobility is to be made by the employer, it should not restrict the procedural safeguards enjoyed by the third-country national concerned during the application procedure, or the rights enjoyed by the EU Blue Card holder during the period of employment or the EU Blue Card renewal procedure.
- (34) The format of the EU Blue Card should be in accordance with Regulation (EC) No 1030/2002⁴, thus enabling the Member States to refer in particular to the information on the conditions under which the person is permitted to work. Member States should be able to indicate additional information in paper format or store such information in electronic format, as referred to in Article 4 of that Regulation and point a(16) of the Annex thereto, in order to provide more precise information on the employment activity concerned. The provision of this additional information should be optional for Member States and should not constitute an additional requirement that would compromise the single permit and the single application procedure.
- (35) The Member State concerned should ensure that applicants have the right to challenge before a court or tribunal any decision rejecting an application for an EU Blue Card, or any decision not to renew or to withdraw an EU Blue Card. This is without prejudice to the possibility to designate an administrative authority to carry out a prior administrative review of such decision.

- (36) Since this Directive aims to address labour and skills shortages in key sectors in the EU labour market, Member States should be able to check whether a vacancy which an applicant for an EU Blue Card intends to fill could instead be filled by national or Union workforce, by third-country nationals lawfully resident in the concerned Member State and already forming part of its labour market by virtue of Union or national law, or by EU long-term residents wishing to move to that Member State for highly qualified employment in accordance with Chapter III of the Directive 2003/109/EC. In case Member States decide to make use of this possibility, they should communicate this in a clear, accessible and transparent way to applicants and employers, including online. This check should not be part of the EU Blue Card renewal procedure in the first Member State. In case of long-term mobility, taking into account the situation of the labour market should only be possible if that Member State has also introduced checks for applicants coming from third countries.

- (37) In implementing this Directive, Member States should refrain from pursuing active recruitment in developing countries in sectors suffering from a lack of personnel. Ethical recruitment policies and principles applicable to public and private sector employers should be developed in key sectors, for example the health sector. This is consistent with EU's commitment to the 2010 WHO Global Code on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel in addition to the Council and Member States' conclusions of 14 May 2007 on the European Programme for Action to tackle the critical shortage of health workers in developing countries (2007-2013) and the education sector, as appropriate. These principles and policies should be strengthened by the development and application of mechanisms, guidelines and other tools to facilitate, as appropriate, circular and temporary migration, as well as other measures that would minimise negative and maximise positive impacts of highly qualified immigration on developing countries in order to turn "brain drain" into "brain gain".
- (38) In line with the priorities of the New Skills Agenda, in particular to improve skills matching and to tackle skills shortages, Member States are encouraged, where appropriate, after consultation of the social partners, to compile lists of sectors of employment which face shortages of highly qualified workers.

(39) A simplified procedure for employers which have been recognised for that purpose should be provided, optional for Member States. The status of recognised employer should bring specific facilitation in terms of procedures and admission conditions – amounting to a simplified procedure – under this Directive and Member States should include sufficient safeguards against abuse. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, these safeguards must take into account the gravity and nature of the misconduct. Where the status of recognised employer is withdrawn during the period of validity of an EU Blue Card issued under the simplified procedure, regular admission conditions should apply upon renewing that EU Blue Card, unless the third-country national concerned is employed by another recognised employer.

(40) In order to ensure that the criteria for admission are still fulfilled, Member States should be allowed to require that, during the first twelve months of legal employment as an EU Blue Card holder, a change of employer or other significant changes, be subject to a communication, including a check of the labour market situation. After these first twelve months, Member States should be able to require only the communication to the competent authorities of a change of employer or a change affecting the fulfilment of the criteria for admission as set out in Article 5, including, where necessary, the new work contract. No check of the labour market situation should be carried out.

This procedure should be limited to an assessment of the elements that have changed.

- (41) In order to promote innovative entrepreneurship, third-country nationals admitted under this Directive may be given the possibility to exercise in parallel a self-employed activity without it affecting the right of residence as an EU Blue Card holder. This ■ should be without prejudice to the continuous obligation to meet the conditions for admission under this Directive, and the EU Blue Card holder should therefore remain in highly qualified employed activity. Member States should have the possibility to lay down in their national law the conditions for access to self-employed activity. Member States should also be entitled to limit the scope of allowed self-employed activity. Member States shall give EU Blue Card holders access to self-employed activities under no less favourable conditions than those provided for under existing national schemes. Any income derived from self-employment will not contribute towards meeting the salary threshold required to qualify as an EU Blue Card holder.
- (42) In order to enhance the contribution that the EU Blue Card holder may make through his higher professional qualifications, Member States should also have the possibility to lay down in their national law provisions allowing EU Blue Card holders to engage in other professional activities which are complementary to their main activity as an EU Blue Card holder. Any income derived from these professional activities will not contribute towards meeting the salary threshold required to qualify as an EU Blue Card holder.

- (43) Equal treatment should be granted to EU Blue Card holders ■ in respect of those branches of social security listed in Article 3 of Regulation (EC) No 883/2004 of the European Parliament and of the Council ■. This Directive does not harmonise the social security legislation of Member States. It is limited to applying the principle of equal treatment in the field of social security to the third-country nationals falling within its scope.
- (44) In the event of mobility between Member States, Regulation (EU) No 1231/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council ■ applies. This Directive should not confer more rights to the mobile EU Blue Card holder than those already provided for in existing Union law in the field of social security for third-country nationals who have cross-border interests between Member States.
- (45) Professional qualifications acquired by a third-country national in another Member State should be recognised in the same way as those of Union citizens. Qualifications acquired in a third country should be taken into account in accordance with Directive 2005/36/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council ■. This Directive should be without prejudice to the conditions set out under national law for the exercise of regulated professions. It should also not prevent Member States from maintaining national restrictions on access to employment which entails at least occasional involvement in the exercise of public authority and the responsibility for safeguarding the general interest of the State, and national rules on activities reserved to nationals, Union citizens or EEA citizens, including in case of mobility to other Member States, which existed at the time of the entry force of the Directive.

- (46) The rights acquired by a beneficiary of international protection as an EU Blue Card holder should be without prejudice to rights enjoyed by the person concerned under Directive 2011/95/EU and under the Geneva Convention in the Member State which granted the protection status. In that Member State, in order to avoid situations of conflicting rules, the provisions on equal treatment and family reunification of this Directive should not apply. Persons who are beneficiaries of international protection in one Member State and EU Blue Card holders in another should enjoy the same rights including equality of treatment with nationals of the Member State of residence and family reunification rights as any other EU Blue Card holders in the latter Member State. The status of a beneficiary of international protection is without prejudice to the fact that the person is also an EU Blue Card holder or that his or her EU Blue Card expires.
- (47) Favourable conditions for family reunification and ■ access to work for spouses should be a fundamental element of this Directive in order to facilitate the attraction of highly qualified workers. Specific derogations from Council Directive 2003/86/EC, which is applicable in both the first and the second Member States, should be provided for in order to reach this aim. Member States should have the possibility to restrict the scope of self-employed activities in which spouses may engage, under the same conditions that apply to EU Blue Card holders. Conditions related to integration or waiting periods should not be applied before allowing family reunification, as highly qualified workers and their families are likely to have a favourable starting point regarding integration in the host community. With the aim of facilitating the swift entry of highly qualified workers, residence permits to their family members should be issued at the same time as the EU Blue Card, where the relevant conditions are fulfilled and the applications were lodged simultaneously.

- (48) Derogations from Council Directive 2003/109/EC should be provided for in order to attract highly qualified workers and encourage their continuous stay in the Union, while enabling mobility within the Union as well as circular migration ■ . EU Blue Card holders who have availed themselves of the possibility to move from one Member State to another Member State should be granted easier access to EU long-term resident status, by allowing them to cumulate periods of residence in different Member States, provided they can demonstrate the number of years of legal and continuous residence required under Article 4(1) of Council Directive 2003/109/EC as holders of an EU Blue Card, of a national permit for highly qualified employment, an authorisation as a student or researcher in accordance with Directive (EU) 2016/801 or as beneficiaries of international protection. They should also demonstrate two years of legal and continuous residence as an EU Blue Card holder immediately prior to the submission of the relevant application within the territory of the Member State where the application for the EU long-term resident status is submitted. As provided for in Council Directive 2003/109/EC, only half of the periods of residence for study purposes may be taken into account in the calculation of the five years of legal and continuous residence, in the Member States where periods of residence for study purposes are taken into account for the calculation of continuous residence.

- (49) In order to foster the mobility of highly qualified workers between the Union and their countries of origin, derogations from Directive 2003/109/EC should be provided for in order to allow longer periods of absence than those provided for in that Directive after highly qualified third-country workers have acquired the EU long-term resident status .
- (50) The occupational and geographical mobility of third-country highly qualified workers should be recognised as an important contributor to improving labour market efficiency across the Union, addressing skills shortages and offsetting regional imbalances. Mobility within the Union should be facilitated.
- (51) This Directive shall be without prejudice to the provisions of Directive 96/71/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council and Directive 2014/67/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council.
- (52) Existing legal uncertainty surrounding business trips of highly qualified workers should be addressed by defining this notion and setting a list of activities that in any case should be considered as business activities in all Member States. These activities should be directly linked to the interests of the employer in the first Member State and related to the duties of the Blue Card holder in the employment for which the Blue Card was granted. Second Member States should not be allowed to require from EU Blue Card holders engaging in business activities a visa, work permit or any other authorisation than the EU Blue Card issued by the first Member State. Where the EU Blue Card is issued by a Member State not applying the Schengen acquis in full, its holder should be entitled to enter and stay in one or several second Member States for the purpose of business activity for up to 90 days in any 180-day period based on the EU Blue Card.

- (53) EU Blue Card holders should be allowed to move to a second Member State under simplified conditions where they intend to apply for a new EU Blue Card based on an existing work contract or binding job offer. Second Member States should not be allowed to require from EU Blue Card holders any other authorisation than the EU Blue Card issued by the first Member State. As soon as they submit a complete application for an EU Blue Card within the deadline provided for in this Directive, it should be possible for the second Member State to allow them to begin employment. EU Blue Card holders should be entitled to begin employment at the latest 30 days after submitting the application. Mobility should be demand-driven and therefore a work contract should always be required in the second Member State, all the conditions in applicable laws, collective agreements or practices in the relevant occupational branch should be met and the salary should meet the threshold set by the second Member State in accordance with this Directive.
- (54) Where EU Blue Card holders intend to apply for an EU Blue Card in a second Member State in order to exercise a regulated profession, their professional qualifications should be recognised in the same way as those of Union citizens exercising the right to free movement, in accordance with Directive 2005/36/EC and other applicable Union and national law.
- (55) While some special rules are provided in this Directive regarding entry and stay in a second Member State for the purpose of business activity, as well as moving to a second Member State to reside and work there under the EU Blue Card in its territory, all the other rules governing the movement of persons across borders as laid down in the relevant provisions of the Schengen acquis apply.

- (56) Where the EU Blue Card is issued by a Member State not applying the Schengen acquis in full and the EU Blue Card holder, in the mobility situations provided for in this Directive, crosses an external border within the meaning of Regulation (EU) 2016/399 of the European Parliament and of the Council ¹, a Member State should be entitled to require evidence that the EU Blue Card holder is entering its territory either for the purpose of business activities or in order to reside and work there under the EU Blue Card based on a work contract or binding job offer. In the case of mobility for carrying out business activities, that Member State should be able to require evidence of the business purpose of the stay, such as invitations, entry tickets, or documents describing the business activities of the company and the position of the EU Blue Card holder in the company.
- (57) Where the EU Blue Card holder moves to a second Member State to apply for an EU Blue Card and he or she is accompanied by family members, that Member State should be able to require the family members to present their ² residence permit issued in the first Member State. Besides, in case of crossing of an external border within the meaning of Regulation (EU) 2016/399, the Members States applying the Schengen acquis in full should consult the Schengen information system and should refuse entry or object to the mobility of persons for whom an alert for the purposes of refusing entry or stay, as referred to in Regulation (EC) No 1987/2006 of the European Parliament and of the Council ³, has been issued in that system

- (58) This Directive should allow the second Member State to request that the EU Blue Card holder, who moves on the basis of an EU Blue Card issued by the first Member State and whose application in the second Member State is rejected, leaves its territory. Where the EU Blue Card holder still has a valid EU Blue Card issued by the first Member State, the second Member State should be able to request that the EU Blue Card holder goes back to the first Member State in accordance with Directive 2008/115/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council⁵. Where the EU Blue Card issued by the first Member State is withdrawn or has expired during the examination of the application, it should be possible for the second Member State to either decide to return the EU Blue Card holder to a third country, in accordance with Directive 2008/115/EC, or request the first Member State to allow re-entry of the EU Blue Card holder to its territory without unnecessary formalities or delay. In this latter case, the first Member State should issue the EU Blue Card holder with a document allowing re-entry to its territory.
- (59) For the purpose of residence of beneficiaries of international protection across Member States, it is necessary to ensure that Member States other than the one which issued international protection are informed of the protection background of the persons concerned in order to enable Member States to comply with their obligations regarding the principle of non-refoulement.

⁵ Directive 2008/115/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 December 2008 on common standards and procedures in Member States for returning illegally staying third-country nationals (OJ L 348, 24.12.2008, p. 98).

- (60) Where a Member State intends to expel a person who has acquired an EU Blue Card in that Member State and who is a beneficiary of international protection in another Member State, that person should enjoy the protection against expulsion guaranteed under Directive 2011/95/EU and under Article 33 of the Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees of 28 July 1951, as amended by the Protocol signed in New York on 31 January 1967 (the Geneva Convention).
- (61) Where the expulsion of a beneficiary of international protection outside the territory of the Member States is permitted under Directive 2011/95/EU, Member States should be obliged to ensure that all information is obtained from relevant sources, including, where appropriate, from the Member State that granted international protection, and that it is thoroughly assessed with a view to guaranteeing that the decision to expel that beneficiary is in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.
- (62) Specific reporting provisions should be provided for to monitor the implementation of this Directive, with a view to identifying and possibly counteracting its possible impacts in terms of brain drain in developing countries and in order to avoid brain waste.

- (63) Since the objectives of this Directive, namely the establishment of a special admission procedure and the adoption of conditions of entry and residence, and the rights, applicable to third-country nationals for the purpose of highly qualified employment and their family members, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States, especially – to better exploit the EU’s overall attractiveness – as regards ensuring their mobility between Member States and offering a clear and single set of admission criteria across the Member States, and can therefore be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union (TEU). In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve those objectives.
- (64) This Directive respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, in accordance with Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union (TEU).

- (65) In accordance with the Joint Political Declaration of 28 September 2011 of Member States and the Commission on explanatory documents¹, Member States have undertaken to accompany, in justified cases, the notification of their transposition measures with one or more documents explaining the relationship between the components of a directive and the corresponding parts of national transposition instruments. With regard to this Directive, the legislator considers the transmission of such documents to be justified.
- (66) In accordance with Articles 1 and 2 and Article 4a(1) of Protocol 21 on the position of the United Kingdom and Ireland in respect of the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice, annexed to TEU and TFEU, and without prejudice to Article 4 of² that Protocol, Ireland is not taking part in the adoption of this Directive and is not bound by or subject to its application.
- (67) In accordance with Articles 1 and 2 of the Protocol 22 on the position of Denmark annexed to TEU and TFEU, Denmark is not taking part in the adoption of this Directive, and is not bound by it or subject to its application.
- (68) Directive 2009/50/EC should therefore be repealed,

HAVE ADOPTED THIS DIRECTIVE:

Article 5
Criteria for admission

1. As regards the admission of a third-country national under this Directive, the applicant shall:
- (a) present a valid work contract or, as provided for in national law, a binding job offer for highly qualified employment, of at least six months in the Member State concerned;

2. Member States shall require that all conditions in the applicable laws, collective agreements or practices in the relevant occupational branches for highly qualified employment are met.

3. 4. By way of derogation from paragraph 3, and for employment in professions which are in particular need of third-country national workers and which belong to major groups 1 and 2 of ISCO, Member States may apply a lower salary threshold of at least 80 percent of the salary threshold set by the Member State concerned in accordance with paragraph 3, which in any event shall not be lower than 1.0 times the average gross annual salary in the Member State concerned.
