to: Working Party on Cooperation in Criminal Matters
Subject: Current legal and practical issues, obstacles and best practices in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters between the EU Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU (Algeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Palestinian Authority, Syria and Tunisia) and possible further steps

Purpose

The present document has been prepared in view of the Strategic Seminar on Judicial Cooperation in Criminal Matters between the EU Member States and Southern neighbours of the EU co-organised by Eurojust, the Cyprus Presidency of the EU, the Attorney General of the Republic of Cyprus and the European Commission (DG Enlargement – TAIEX), which will be held on 3-5 October 2012, in Limassol, Republic of Cyprus. It has been prepared solely on the basis of the replies provided by the Member States to a questionnaire prepared by Eurojust (see Annex 1).

It consists of:

(1) a summary of the current legal and practical issues, obstacles and best practices in four areas of judicial cooperation in criminal matters (mutual legal assistance, extradition, transfer of criminal proceedings and transfer of sentenced persons) between the EU Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU (Algeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Palestinian Authority, Syria and Tunisia);
(2) an overview of the legal basis applicable in the four areas of judicial cooperation in criminal matters between each EU Member State and each Southern neighbour of the EU;

(3) statistics on requests concerning the same four areas of judicial cooperation in criminal matters issued to and received by each Member State with respect to each Southern neighbour of the EU, and

(4) possible further steps.

1. Summary of current legal and practical issues, obstacles and best practices in four areas of judicial cooperation in criminal matters between the EU Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU

1.1 Mutual legal assistance

✓ Legal and practical issues and obstacles

- A considerable number of Member States have little or no experience with Southern neighbours of the EU.
- Generally, the Member States that report having relative experience in this field identify the following legal and practical issues and obstacles as recurrent:
  - Excessive delays with regard to the execution of MLA requests and, at times, lack of execution by Southern neighbours of the EU, which can amount to years;
  - Lack of replies to requests for updates on progress of same, which derives, among other reasons, from the very formal (usually the diplomatic) communication channels;
  - Transmission of MLA requests through diplomatic channels prove to be time consuming and ineffective;
  - MLA requests are often transmitted simultaneously though different channels;
  - Slow communication between central authorities, often via embassies, with a view to identifying and addressing issues;
- Individually some Member States have identified the following legal and practical issues and obstacles:
  - Lack of information on channels of communication or contact points in the central authorities to whom preliminary questions are addressed prior to transmission of the formal MLA request.
International cooperation on the basis of the principle of reciprocity is generally more formal and slow.

Cooperation with the Palestinian Authority is considered difficult on the basis of absence of recognition of statehood.

When incurred, the death penalty is a legal obstacle to the execution of an MLA request.

Banking secrecy is often an obstacle to the execution of MLA requests addressed to Lebanon.

Poor quality of the translation of MLA requests.

Insufficient factual basis for the request and insufficient explanation of why the requested evidence is relevant to the investigation or proceedings, or why additional requests are made.

For asset recovery requests, difficulty in understanding what information is required and what is possible under the law of the EU Member State concerned.

Diversity of legal and related approaches to identical legal concepts. On the principle of reciprocity, a difficulty appears in the establishment of whether the legal systems of both requesting and requested countries are identical or whether it is sufficient that both countries reciprocally recognise their legal systems. This assessment appears to depend on (a) legislation; (b) procedures in place in both countries; and (c) previous experience with the country in question, or with countries with similar or identical legal systems.

Best practices

- Individually some Member States have identified the following best practices:

  - Generally, the presence of liaison magistrates in Morocco and Algeria proves to be a very effective tool in overcoming legal and practical obstacles.
  - The presence of a liaison police officer in Morocco and an embassy of a Member State in a Southern neighbour of the EU prove to be extremely valuable.
  - Very efficient legal assistance provided by Morocco in a case of sexual abuse of minors.
  - A Member State has recently had very positive experience with Lebanon.
  - Recourse to Eurojust’s contact point in Israel.
The visit of the prosecutor and the team of investigators to the requested Southern neighbour of the EU reduces formalities and results in more swift execution of the MLA request.

Details of cooperation, including hindrances, are raised whenever possible at a bilateral level, or during events that focus on cooperation with certain countries, including referrals to Eurojust and the subsequent holding of coordination meetings.

Direct communication where possible, between prosecutors, investigators and central authorities.

For asset recovery and other highly technical requests it is advisable to send draft documentation in advance.

Publication by the central authority of MLA guidelines that provide practical advice and guidance on how to make requests to their specific Member State.

Cooperation with Southern neighbours of the EU is quite effective and requests received from these countries are executed as promptly as possible.

Mutual legal assistance is more effective with those Southern neighbours of the EU with which cooperation is established on the basis of an international treaty, such as Israel (the European Convention on mutual assistance in criminal matters, 1959).

1.2 Extradition

- Legal and practical issues and obstacles

  A considerable number of Member States have little or no experience with Southern neighbours of the EU.

  Individually, the Member States that have experience, have reported the following legal and practical obstacles:

  - The dual nationality of the person whose extradition is requested is a legal issue, and may constitute an obstacle.
  - Most southern neighbours of the EU do not extradite their own nationals.
  - Prima facie evidence requirement, e.g. the meeting of legal standards on evidence according to Israeli law, is a frequent legal issue during extradition proceedings with this state, when France is the requesting State.
The principle of dual criminality has caused legal (similar wording of the provisions were expected to be found) and practical difficulties (in ascertaining how the offence in question is defined, to address the issue, e.g. of accessory extradition).

Insufficiency of the principle of reciprocity and the absence of an agreement are sometimes invoked by some Southern neighbours of the EU as grounds for refusal of execution of MLA requests, despite the country in question being obliged to provide the requested assistance by virtue of international conventions, such as UNTOC (UN Convention Against Transnational Organised Crime) and UNCAC (UN Convention Against Corruption).

Despite Article 8 (extradition) of the Montreal Convention of 23 September 1971, Algeria has denied extradition of a suspect of terrorism to an EU Member State on the grounds that the alleged fact would be considered a political offence.

Concerning the principle of reciprocity, a difficulty appears to lie in the establishment of whether the legal systems of both requesting and requested countries are identical or whether it is sufficient that both countries reciprocally recognise their legal systems.

Concerning the rule of specialty, despite it being universally accepted, its recourse has, in practice, proved to be unable to exclude all possibilities of extraditing a person for offences other than those for which the extradition had been granted and which had been committed prior to the their extradition.

When incurred, the death penalty is a legal obstacle to extradition to Southern neighbours of the EU.

In some cases, lack of information on the rule of law in the requesting State, notably with respect to the right to a fair trial, can constitute both a practical and a legal issue during the extradition procedure.

Issues related to the certification of translations into some of the languages of Southern neighbours of the EU.

Delays in, or absence of the provision of updates on the progress of extradition requests.

Delays due to the use of diplomatic channels for the transmission of the extradition requests. However, when possible and urgent, Interpol is used.
Best practices

- The provision by the Member States concerned of assurances that the person whose extradition is requested will be allowed to serve their sentence in the requested state (e.g. Israel).
- The visit of the prosecutor and the team of investigators from an EU Member State to the requested Southern neighbour of the EU in question.

1.3 Transfer of criminal proceedings

- The vast majority of Member States have little or no experience in this field of judicial cooperation.
- Requests for transfer of criminal proceedings have been denied by Israel on the basis that there was insufficient evidence to undertake legal proceedings in Israel. However, it has been possible to request the extradition of the suspect according to Israeli law.
- Possibility of acceptance by the Member State concerned of a request for transfer of criminal proceedings despite the absence of an international treaty to which the requesting state is a party.
- Absence of either bilateral or multilateral legal instrument (non ratification).

1.4 Transfer of sentenced persons

- The vast majority of Member States have little or no experience in this field of judicial cooperation.
- Concerning applications for transfer of sentenced persons to Southern neighbours of the EU, authorities of the EU Member State concerned have refused them on the basis of concerns over possible widespread corruption in the justice system.
- A number of Member States have reported that there are no legal or practical issues concerning transfer of sentenced persons to Israel, and the transfer was done on the basis of the 1983 Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons.
- In the specific case of requests from Morocco, the very few cases of transfer raised the problem of payment of fines, without which transfers cannot be granted. Usually, convictions for drug trafficking include a fine, and that will constitute an obstacle to the transfer since Moroccan authorities will not allow transfer if the fine is not paid.
- Very lengthy proceedings considering all steps that have to be taken by various authorities.
2. Overview of applicable legal bases in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters between each EU Member State and each Southern neighbour of the EU

With regard to bilateral legal instruments in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters applicable between each EU Member State and each Southern neighbour of the EU in the four areas of judicial cooperation in criminal matters in question: (a) mutual legal assistance; (b) extradition; (c) transfer of criminal proceedings; and (d) transfer of sentenced persons, a table is provided in Annex 2.

With regard to multilateral legal instruments applicable between the EU Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU in these areas of judicial cooperation, an overview is provided below, albeit not exhaustive, of the applicable multilateral legal instruments prepared on the basis of the replies from the Member States to the questionnaire referred to above (see also Annex 1).

Council of Europe Conventions
- European Convention on Extradition (Paris, 13 December 1957);
- European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters (Strasbourg, 20 April 1959);\(^1\)
  - Second Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters (Strasbourg, 8 November 2001);
- Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons (Strasbourg, 21 March 1983);

United Nations Conventions
- International Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women and Children (Geneva, 30 September 1921);\(^2\)
- International Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women of Full Age (Geneva, 11 October 1933);\(^3\)
- Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others (Lake Success, New York, 21 March 1950);

\(^1\) Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters has not been signed and ratified by Israel.
\(^2\) As amended by the Protocol signed at Lake Success, New York, on 12 November 1947.
\(^3\) As amended by the Protocol signed at Lake Success, New York, on 12 November 1947.
• Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs (New York, 30 March 1961)\(^1\);
• Convention on Psychotropic Substances (Vienna, 21 February 1971);
• Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation (Montreal Convention) (Montreal, 23 September 1971);
• United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (Vienna, 20 December 1988);
• International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings (New York, 15 December 1997);
• International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism (New York, 9 December 1999);
• United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (Palermo Convention) (New York, 15 November 2000);

In the absence of such bilateral treaties or international conventions, the vast majority of the Member States may cooperate with Southern neighbours of the EU on the basis of the principle of reciprocity. In this respect, the following practices have also been identified individually by some Member States:

• In some types of judicial cooperation (\textit{i.e.} transfer of sentenced persons, extradition) the existence of a bilateral treaty or an international convention is crucial and the principle of reciprocity does not apply;
• The principle of reciprocity can be used as a supplementary legal basis when a bilateral treaty and/or an international instrument proves to be an insufficient legal basis;
• The application of the principle of reciprocity is assessed on a case-by-case basis as it does not in itself constitute a sufficient legal basis to execute a request;
• Domestic legislation is sufficient legal basis, irrespective of the principle of reciprocity.

\(^{1}\) As amended by the Protocol amending the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1972.
3. Statistics on requests concerning judicial cooperation in criminal matters issued to and received by each EU Member State to each Southern neighbour of the EU (from 1 January 2007 to 31 May 2012)

With regard to mutual legal assistance, the EU Member States that have cooperated (requests issued and received) more frequently with Southern neighbours of the EU from 1 January 2007 to 31 May 2012 have been France (1122), The Netherlands (695), Belgium (524) and Spain (452). Concerning extradition requests: France (139), Spain (138), Belgium (91), and Italy (62), have been the most frequent. With regard to transfer of criminal proceedings, France (240), Belgium (46), Spain (40) and The Netherlands (10) have been the most frequent. Finally, with regard to transfer of sentenced persons, Spain (232), France (171) and The Netherlands (77), are the Member States that have more frequently cooperated with Southern neighbours of the EU.

A table containing statistics on requests concerning judicial cooperation in criminal matters in the above areas issued to and received by each EU Member State to each Southern neighbour of the EU is provided in Annex 3.

4. Possible further steps

On the basis of the replies to the questionnaire provided by the EU Member States, the importance of the role of contact points in Southern neighbours of the EU comes to the fore, be it liaison magistrates from Member States posted in these countries or Eurojust contact points. In this respect, it is worth noting that Eurojust has contact points posted in Israel, Egypt and Tunisia. The importance of contact points in the facilitation of judicial cooperation in criminal matters is further emphasized by the recurrent delays and inefficiency encountered by Member States that arise from the excessive formality and at times the uncertainty of the appropriate channel for the transmission of the requests, generally the diplomatic channel.

1 Belgian provided statistics which cover the period from 1 January 2004 to 14 August 2012.
Furthermore, the relatively small number of bilateral agreements between the EU Member States and Southern neighbours of the EU and the relevant UN and Council of Europe Conventions, provide limited legal bases for cooperation and could perhaps be indicative, in the long term of an opportunity for the EU to consider concluding agreements with these countries in these areas. The Council has recently stressed the importance of ensuring a coherent EU policy in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters and has identified as one of the relevant criteria in the identification of third States as priority negotiating partners for the EU “the existence in the country concerned of special or social conditions which suggest the actual or potential need to ensure a more effective cooperation in the field of cooperation in criminal matters: e.g. neighbouring Countries suffering from a period of relative political instability, such as those involved in the transitional phase following the so-called “Arab spring”. In the nearer future, however, the establishment of Eurojust contact points in other Southern neighbours of the EU can be seen as extremely beneficial.

Questionnaire on Judicial Cooperation in Criminal Matters between the EU Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU (Algeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Palestinian Authority, Syria and Tunisia)

Eurojust and the upcoming Cyprus Presidency of the Council of the EU are organising a Strategic Seminar on Judicial Cooperation in Criminal Matters between the Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU that will take place in Cyprus on 3-5 October 2012. The seminar will focus on cooperation in the fields of mutual legal assistance in criminal matters, extradition, transfer of criminal proceedings and transfer of sentenced persons.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to gather information on the legal framework currently applicable on cooperation between Member States and the Southern neighbours of the EU, as well as on legal and practical issues, obstacles and best practices identified by the Member States. The results of the questionnaire will be presented at the appropriate Council level and will serve as a basis for the structure of discussions during the seminar.

On behalf of the upcoming Cyprus Presidency, the External Relations Team of Eurojust would kindly request your Central Authority to complete the questionnaire and return it to legiservice@eurojust.europa.eu by no later than 18 June 2012.

Should any clarification be needed, please do not hesitate to contact the Legal Service of Eurojust.

Many thanks for your cooperation,

Malci Gabrijelcic
National Member for Slovenia and Chair of the External Relations Team of Eurojust

Transfer of criminal proceedings

- Preliminary observation regarding the transfer of criminal proceedings.
- Like many Council of Europe Member States, some of them being also EU-Member States, Belgium did not sign or ratify the Council of Europe's Transfer of Criminal Proceedings Convention (1972).
- To date, Belgium did not sign or ratify any bilateral Treaty or Convention regarding transfer of criminal proceedings.
- This means that there is no treaty basis for an obligatory – insofar the treaty conditions such as double criminality are fulfilled - transfer and subsequent acceptance of jurisdiction re. the prosecution of a criminal matter.
- The only alternative is the so-called laying of information, 'regulated' for the first time in the 1959 MLA-Convention of the Council of Europe.
Chapter VI – Laying of information in connection with proceedings
Article 21
1. Information laid by one Contracting Party with a view to proceedings in the courts of another Party shall be transmitted between the Ministries of Justice concerned unless a Contracting Party avails itself of the option provided for in paragraph 6 of Article 15.
2. The requested Party shall notify the requesting Party of any action taken on such information and shall forward a copy of the record of any verdict pronounced.

3. The provisions of Article 16 shall apply to information laid under paragraph 1 of this article.

Some more recent bilateral MLA-Treaties or Conventions essentially copied this provision. I refer to the relevant indications in the table below.

Contrary to the transfer of criminal proceedings, the laying of information is a mere informal and thus voluntary type of international co-operation in criminal matters. There is no requirement whatsoever for a treaty or convention basis.

The laying of information allows any State to submit a case, most likely a case that is hardly being investigated and does not involve serious offences, to another State for reason of e.g. (1) the suspect being a national of the other State or (2) the victim(s) being nationals of the other State and located in that State or (3) the offence(s) being partly or wholly being committed in that State.

The requesting State will not actually transfer its jurisdiction to – continue to – investigate, prosecute or try the case, not even in case the requested State would agree to do so. The latter State has no obligation whatsoever to agree to 'take over' the prosecution of the matter, given the total absence of a treaty basis and thus obligation to do so.

Laying of information is in practise also used as the vehicle to provide all necessary evidence under the application of the much older and more general principle of international criminal law know as 'aut dedere, aut judicare' or 'to surrender or to try'. This principle is explicitly contained in article 6§2 of the 1957 European Extradition Convention of the Council of Europe. In this version, the application is linked to the nationality exception to extradition that most Civil Law, as contrary to Common Law, Member States of the Council of Europe apply. If the person sought, cannot be extradited because of him / her having the nationality of the requested State, that State has the obligation to verify whether the matter can be prosecuted. Again, aut dedere, aut judicare does not imply an obligation to actually prosecute, only an obligation to verify whether domestic legal conditions would allow prosecuting the foreign matter.

If the requested State is able and willing to prosecute its own national for the offences committed in the requesting State, the latter should send the complete case file in order to provide the available evidence etc. this transmission is not a transfer of the proceedings insofar there is no treaty or conventional base available, it is basically an application of the informal laying of information.

Transfer of criminal proceedings

France is not party to the 1972 Council of Europe Convention on the “Transfer of Proceedings in Criminal Matters”. There are no similar provisions in the bilateral conventions ratified by France. However, most of the above mentioned conventions on mutual legal assistance in criminal matters include specific provisions on the “Transfer of Criminal Proceedings” in the sense of article 21 of the 1959 European convention on mutual legal assistance (“Laying of information in connection with proceedings”).

Transfer of criminal proceedings

Pursuant to domestic provisions and MLA practice, incoming and outgoing requests to take over criminal prosecution form their own discreet category within the general field of mutual assistance in criminal matters. No special multilateral or bilateral agreements applicable under international law exist with any of the above-mentioned states.

³ Austria is unable to provide reliable statistics.
⁴ Belgium has provided statistics which cover the period from 1 January 2004 to 14 August 2012.
⁶ No such statistics are available at the Ministry of Justice. The Office of the Prosecutor General only has statistics concerning MLA.
